China, Russia In Major Clash

Both Charge 'Invasion'

TOKYO (CP)—Fighting broke out between Soviet and Chinese troops today on the frontier of Sinkiang's province, home of Peking's nuclear arsenal and missle-testing grounds.

China charged that several hundred Soviet troops under cover of two helicopters invaded Sinkiang and there were many Chinese casualties.

The Soviet government a little later charged that Chinese troops penetrated Russian territory and there were casualties. The nationality of these was not stated.

Each side said they had launched strong protests against the latest incident.

The official Tass news agency said the Soviet government reiterated earlier warnings that "any encroachments onto Soviet territory will meet with a decisive rebuff."

Tass said the fighting today was in the Semipalatinsk area of Kazakhstan across from China's Sinkiang province, the same area as a clash during the World communist conference in Moscow in June.

Tass said two Chinese officers were captured on Soviet territory. It said there were some deaths and injuries in the fighting but gave no details.

'Chinese Ignored Warning Signs'

Tass quoted the Soviet protest note, delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow, as saying Chinese troops ignored warning signals and demands that they leave Soviet territory.

Instead, they opened fire on Soviet border troops with automatic weapons and tried to bring up reinforcements of two further groups numbering 60 to 70 men each, it said.

"As a result of measures taken by the Soviet border troops, the violators were thrown back beyond the Soviet borders," it said.

China claimed hundreds of Soviet troops backed by tanks, armored cars and helicopters invaded Chinese territory, killing and injuring many Chinese troops.

A Chinese-language broadcast by Radio Peking said more than 10 tanks and armored cars were among the forces that penetrated more than a mile into Sinkiang, site of China's nuclear testing grounds.

Chinese border troops went into action and in the following skirmish several Chinese border patrolmen were killed or injured and several Chinese troops were encircled, the broadcast claimed.

Then the Russians sent in more troops, the broadcast continued, and further clashes were expected.

Troop Withdrawal Demanded

The fighting centred in the Tiehliekti area of Yumin County on Sinkiang's northwestern border with the Soviet Union, Radio Peking said.

The foreign ministry in Peking lodged a protest with the Soviet embassy, denouncing the "intrusion" and demanding the immediate withdrawal of the Russian troops. Otherwise the Soviet union must face the consequences of the action, the note said.

Sinkiang province, in the northwest corner of China, long has been a trouble spot. The Russians have accused the Chinese of initiating border incidents there. The Chinese have levelled similar charges and accused the Russians of kidnapping residents in the province.

Singkiang long has been of interest to the Russians. They practically took over the province to exploit its vast uranium resources early in the days of Communist rule in China but later relinquished exploration rights there.

Sinkiang is the site of Lop Nor, the Chinese nuclear testing ground and missile centre.

The last known clash between the two Communist giants along the Sinkiang border occurred on June 11 in the Yumin area.

In lodging the protest note, the Chinese foreign ministry claimed the Soviet Union was trying "to create a new bloody incident."

It demanded the Russians "immediately cease firing and withdraw" all troops back across the border.

Peking's official New China news agency said the "situation is developing."

It accused the Russians of

POLITICAL RIDDLE

The provincial constituency of Alberni is a major political riddle in a province of many political riddles.

It stretches from the summery beaches of Qualicum, west through Port Alberni with its heavy industry and fifth highest average wage in Canada, then north along the roadless, mountainous coast to the fishing villages on Nootka and Kyuquot Sounds.

How Alberni will go Aug. 27 is a tough bet. Times staffer Jim Hume went to the riding to see what's going on. His report is on page 14.

Nominations for the election close today. A list of candidates for the 55 legislative seats is on page 20.

STREET FIGHTING CONTINUES

300 Injured in Irish Rioting

From Reuters-AP

LONDONDERRY (CP) — Rioters fought police again today at the barricades in the embattled Bogside district of Londonderry today after Northern Ireland's worst bout of violence since the Great Depression in the 1930s left more than 300 persons injured Tuesday.

More than 300 police broke through the barricades of Bogside in an effort to quell rioting which raged all night.

The police, armed with clubs and tear gas, ducked stones and gasoline bombs as they tried to clear the Bogside area in which more than 140 persons were injured overnight.

The battleground was a desolate scene, with overturned cars, burning wooden barricades and thousands of paving stones and broken bottles littering the street.

Weary police returned to the battle after a night in which they were the main casualties —90 of them were injured. One was turned into a human torch when hit in the back by a gasoline bomb.

YOUTH WAS SHOT

A youth was shot in the shoulder in unexplained circumstances.

Police used tear gas to disperse rioters Tuesday night.

They used it again today to break into Bogside.

The district is the flashpoint of Protestant-Roman Catholic violence which has convulsed Londonderry and other cities in Northern Ireland for nearly a year.

For a short while today it looked as if the fighting was at last over, after the government banned all marches and meetings and moved British troops up to the outskirts of Londonderry.

But this turned out to be only a breakfast-time lull.

Rioters came back to the Bogside's barricaded border in greater strength to stop police from maching in.

A hail of rocks greeted the police and they responded by using the tear gas.

As police moved along streets today gasoline bombs rained down at them from rooftops. At this stage the battle had raged for 19 hours.

At the height of the rioting some 300 British infantrymen from the Prince of Wales' Own Regiment were brought up to a naval base outside the city. An official termed it "a precautionary measure."

But Irish authorities did not call them in, despite the fierce street fighting.

The government is likely to come under strong attack for not banning the Tuesday's big Protestant parade which bore every sign of provoking trouble.

Belatedly this morning the government decreed a ban on all public meetings and marches throughout the six provinces—except those of the Salvation Army. The ban will be reviewed at the end of August.

At noon today the fighting continued in the narrow, rubble-strewn streets of the Bogside slums. Police penetrated further into the Catholic district than at any time in this or previous riots.

About 800 Bogside men were drawn up behind a barricade across Rossville Street on the fringe of the Catholic area. Before the barricades a pillar of black smoke climbed high from piles of blazing tires and oil drums.

KIDS CARRY BOMBS

Dozens of youngsters, gasoline bombs at the ready, lined the roof of a big new apartment block ready to attack if the police should advance. The police were lined up across the street just out of rock-throwing range.

Behind them a crowd of the city's Protestants began massing at street corners. Most stores in the city centre were closed, and the town looked to be set for another riotous evening.

The Bogside mobs now have a virtually unlimited supply of gasoline taken from a filling

Attacks Cong 'Answer' To South Peace Proposal

SAIGON (Reuters) — The National Liberation Front announced today the Viet Cong will continue fighting in South Vietnam until it has forced all foreign troops to withdraw from the country.

The NLF's secret radio station—voice of the Viet Cong-sponsored provisional revolutionary government—made the announcement a day after a countrywide series of attacks was launched by the Viet Cong, with support from five North Vietnamese regular divisions.

The attacks dropped off sharply today, with only about 20 shellings reported compared with 150 shellings and ground assaults against southern allied bases and towns Tuesday.

The Associated Press reported that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces claimed they killed 1,450 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops Tuesday.

197 KILLED

About 90 Americans and 107 government troops were reported killed Tuesday, and 500 Americans and 371 South Vietnamese were wounded. In recent weeks the daily average had fallen as low as 15 to 20 Americans killed in combat.

The NLF radio earlier said the attacks were ordered by North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh to try to gain a decisive victory to mark two important North Vietnamese anniversaries: The revolt against the French on Aug. 18, 1945, and Ho's proclamation of independence 15 days later.

Observers here saw the response from the Viet Cong as a final rejection of President Nguyen Van Thieu's latest peace offer last month of challenging the NLF in elections here, and as proof that the Communists are prepared to continue the military struggle.

The fighting came after a 7½-week lull in military activity, and had been predicted by military observers and high officials.

But the U.S. command was reluctant to term the series of attacks an offensive, preferring to class it as a high point.

The withdrawal of 25,000 U.S. troops announced by President Nixon continued. The U.S. command announced that 3,600 more men were leaving this week.

This will bring the total withdrawn to 17,200, leaving 7,800 to be pulled out by the end of the month.

Eligible Voters Increase By 32 Per Cent

The number of registered voters in British Columbia has soared by 32 per cent to 1,151,806 since the 1966 provincial election.

A province-wide enumeration completed yesterday by provincial authorities has produced 277,879 more eligible voters for the Aug. 27 provincial election.

Of the 873,927 eligible to vote in the 1966 election, 596,716 or 68.28 per cent of the electorate actually cast ballots.

The large increase in registered voter numbers is attributed both to the enumeration—first since 1960 which went out and found residents who hadn't bothered to register and also to the rapid population growth of the past three years.

Military Cuts Announced

OTTAWA CP) — The radar and communications training centre at Clinton, Ont., and logistic depots at Coburg and London, will be "phased out" over the next two years, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today. A depot at Montreal will close within a year and activities at St. Hubert, Que., Military Base, will be curtailed in the changes which will affect about 2,600 military and civilian personnel.

Three Rivers Chief Admits He's in Dark

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Police Chief Amedee Delage told a provincial inquiry commission Tuesday he doesn't know what is going on in the city police force.

His only contacts with his deputy, Capt. Georges Gagnon, are made by telephone, he testified.

The commission, headed by Judge Roger Gosselin, is investigating the police department in Trois-Rivieres, Quebec's fifth largest city. Chief Delage was the first witness called.

The inquiry was ordered by the provincial government after Alderman Gaston Vallieres declared at a city council meeting in March that prostitution was flourishing here with the support of certain members of the police force.

Chief Delage also testified that it was unusual for anybody in the 150-man force to work during the weekend.

"Your detective squad has nine men," Judge Gosselin remarked. "Is it efficient?"

"I don't know and I haven't tried to find out," the police chief replied.

Answering another question by the judge, Chief Delage said Sgt. Paul Dallaire is the head of the morality squad, but he is not sure how long he has held this post.

MET HIM ONCE

"I only met him on one occasion, following a complaint, when he was responsible for checking on women of easy virtue. Our interview lasted for three or four minutes. I asked him to change his methods of dealing with prostitutes."

"Did he change?" the judge asked.

"I haven't made sure of this," the chief replied. "It didn't occur to me to do so."

The inquiry then continued behind closed doors.

Writer Says Kennedy Lied About Accident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy did not make the impulsive 150-yard swim between two islands off the Massachusetts coast the night his car plunged into the water killing Mary Jo Kopechne, columnist Jack Anderson said today.

Anderson said he learned that Kennedy made the trip from Chappaquiddick Island to Martha's Vineyard in a boat along with two friends.

In his nationally televised remarks after the accident, Kennedy said he tried to rescue Miss Kopechne along with help from his cousin Joe Gargan and a friend, Paul Markham. He said the three went to the ferry for Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard but it was closed for the night.

"I suddenly jumped into the water and impulsively swam across, nearly drowning once in the effort, returned to my hotel around 2 a.m. and collapsed in my room," Kennedy said.

But Anderson, who writes jointly with Drew Pearson, said "Gargan and Markham rustled up a boat and took Kennedy to adjoining Martha's Vineyard. The senator did not suddenly jump into the water and impulsively swim the treacherous 150-yard channel as he later claimed."

Anderson said Kennedy had asked Gargan to take the blame for the accident — to tell police that he, not Kennedy, was driving the car. The late-night trip across to the other island, Anderson said, was designed to

JESMER . . . drug overdose victim

Second Youth Accuses Trudeau

VANCOUVER (CP) — A second youth said today that he was punched by Prime Minister Trudeau during a demonstration here last week.

Roderick Daniel Young, 19, of Burnaby said he can't follow the action of Richard Bruce Jesmer of Niagra Falls, Ont., in filing an official complaint against the prime minister because he doesn't know anyone who witnessed the incident.

"If I could find anyone now I'd definitely go in and swear out an information," Young said in an interview. "If he gets away with it once there's no reason why he won't try it again."

Jesmer, a 17-year-old laborer who has been spending the summer in Vancouver, was admitted to the emergency ward of Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday for observation after telling Vancouver Sun reporter Simma Holt that he had taken "about 20 pep pills or get-up pills." He was discharged during the night.

A justice of the peace is to rule Friday on whether prosecution should proceed on Jesmer's complaint accusing Mr. Trudeau of common assault. The alleged incident occurred during the Friday night demonstration by about 300 persons as the prime minister was making his way to the Seaforth Armory in downtown Vancouver to attend a $50-a-plate Liberal fund raising dinner.

Romania Stresses Own Path

BUCHAREST (Reuters) — Romania at its just-concluded Communist party congress reasserted its aim to develop as an independent and sovereign Communist state despite growing Russian disapproval.

President Nicolae Ceausescu, the state and party leader, once again propounded his doctrine that membership in the Soviet-led Communist alliance does not preclude a member state from formulating its own policies at home and abroad.

His unyielding statement is a challenge to Soviet authorities on the most basic of issues—defence, foreign policy, ideology and economic co-operation.

Nearly 2,000 delegates attended the opening of the Romanian 10th party congress to hear a five-hour statement by Ceausescu restating in clear terms his intention to pursue an open-door policy toward Communist and non-Communist countries alike.

Apparently the strong-willed leader no longer fears the fate which overtook Czechoslovakia last summer—although he has charted a course certain to bring him into continuing friction with the Kremlin.

The Soviet delegate, Konstantin Katushev, warned the Romanians that the visit of President Nixon to Bucharest was construed in Moscow as an attempt to drive wedges between Communist states.

Katushev, without mentioning names, reminded the Romanians that wedge-driving tactics by "perfidious bridge builders" could also lead to counter-revolutionary plots. He obviously had Czechoslovakia in mind. Economic penetration by the West, Katushev warned, also could have dire consequences.

Grits Complete Candidate List

VICTORIA (CP)—The Lberal party completed its slate of 55 candidates Tuesday for the British Columbia provincial election Aug. 27, as Social Credit and the NDP had done previously.

Two independent candidates also entered the election battle Tuesday, bringing the number to six. There are four Communists and one Conservative — party leader John de Wolf. Nominations closed at 1 p.m. today. (Unofficial list of candidates in all ridings is published on Page 20.)

Meanwhile, Premier W. A. C. Bennett said it was a terrible thing for NDP leader Tom Berger "to call that bus strike (Tuesday) morning and causing hardship for people without cars in the rain."

Expansion of picketing by 550 striking oil workers stopped B.C. Hydro buses in Vancouver and Victoria until barred by a court injunction.

Asked if he was really accusing Mr. Berger of calling the stoppage, Mr. Bennett said:

"The labor bosses and Berger claim he is closely associated with them, and I charge them with irresponsible action on a group of people who couldn't fight back, who don't have cars, while they (labor leaders) drive around in their cars buying gasoline from service stations and not supporting the strike at all."

Mr. Bennett stumped Vancouver's North Shore ridings Tuesday asking all good Liberals to vote Social Credit.

'SPLINTER PARTY'

He said the Liberal party is a splinter party and "there is no room for a splinter party"—recalling a statement by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis during the last federal election.

The premier attended rallies in the North Vancouver-Seymour North Vancouver-Capilano and West Vancouver - Howe Sound ridings and at one stage dropped into a beauty salon where he sat under a hair dryer for photographers.

Mr. Berger joined former NDP leader Robert Strachan in the Cowichan - Malahat riding on Vancouver Island for an election rally.

Mr. Berger said he would make no predictions about the election outcome, and criticized Mr. Bennett and Liberal leader Pat McGeer for making predictions. Then Mr. Berger predicted an NDP victory.

Liberal leader Pat McGeer didn't predict a victory but he did forecast a swing to his party in the North and Interior regions of the province.

"Change is coming in B.C. and in the vanguard of that change is the North and Interior of the province," he told a rally of 350 persons in Prince Rupert.

"This is where change came in 1952 when British Columbia desperately needed such change."

He also announced a Liberal government would establish a lease to purchase plan for land to cut home-building costs.

A Crown corporation would assemble land and make it available to individuals on a lease to purchase basis for no down payment. The program would be assisted with federal loans.

Home building standards would be unified to cut costs and a Liberal government would assist municipalities and the construction industry to research new building methods and materials to reduce prices, he said.

Mr. McGeer was to continue campaigning in Dawson Creek today but his plane was grounded at Prince Rupert because of bad weather.

Registrar of voters Ken Morton said Tuesday there are 1,151,806 registered voters, 31.8 per cent more than for the last election. On Sept. 12, 1966, 596,716 of the 873,027 eligible cast ballots.

. . . CLASH

"continuing to mass large numbers of troops and tanks in an attempt to provoke still larger conflicts."

The Soviet note accused the Chinese of deliberately planning today's action.

It said Soviet observers Tuesday noticed Chinese military units being brought up to the area of the border concerned and communications lines being set up.

REFUSE TO MEET

It added that Soviet border authorities had called for a meeting with their Chinese equivalents to prevent the situation getting out of hand but the Chinese had declined.

There have been several border clashes since Soviet and Chinese troops fought pitched battles on the frozen border Ussuri River in March.

At least 40 Russians and an undisclosed number of Chinese have died in the fighting.

The latest flare-up followed a Soviet announcement Aug. 8 that the Russians and Chinese had reached agreement on another friction point, navigation rights on rivers and lakes bordering Manchuria.

The agreement covered shipping regulations and traffic maintenance on the Amur, Argon and Ussuri rivers along the borders and on Sugacha and Hanka lakes.

STAGE WALKOUT

During the negotiations at Khabarovsk near the Manchurian border Moscow claimed the Chinese walked out July 12 after the Russians refused to discuss border adjustments. The Chinese returned the next day.

China has been demanding talks on border differences, since it claims most of the siberian maritime provinces. The Soviet Union has refused.

The Soviet announcement said the next round of navigation negotiatons would be held in China in 1970.

House Searched

MOSCOW (AP) — Unofficial Soviet sources say government secret police have searched the home of writer Anatoly Kuznetsov, who defected to the west in London July 30, and seized manuscripts and other papers. The sources said the search was made at Kuznetsov's apartment in Tula, about 100 miles south of Moscow.

get Kennedy off Chappaquiddick Island before the accident was reported.

After Kennedy returned to his hotel and changed into dry clothes, Anderson said, he spoke to the hotel room clerk to establish an alibi.

"The next morning," Anderson said, "Gargan and Markham returned to Edgartown to pick Kennedy up. They assumed that they were still the only three persons who knew about the accident and they wanted another look at the scene in the daylight.

"As they were crossing the channel, however, someone mentioned that a car had been found bottom up in Poucha Pond. Kennedy was shaken and walked off alone to get a hold on his emotions. Standing behind a car, he decided what he must do. It was his moment of truth," Anderson said.

Both Kennedy and Gargan have denied that Kennedy ever asked his cousin to take the blame for the accident.

After the ferry docked, Anderson said, Kennedy telephoned his lawyer, Burke Marshall, then returned to Edgartown and gave a statement to the police.

Another Major Oil User May Face Union Pickets

VANCOUVER (CP) — There was no change early today in the strike by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' Union in British Columbia.

There had been rumors that "another major user of petroleum products" would be picketed by the union today.

However the union spokesman who had made previous announcements, Buck Philp, was not available for information early today. The union office said at 6:30 a.m. PDT, he was not expected to appear for a few hours.

Any new development may be awaiting his return.

The prediction of further action was made after picket lines caused a complete halt of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority bus service in Vancouver and Victoria Tuesday.

The bus line, the major carrier of commuter traffic in the two cities, resumed operation in time for the evening rush hour but an estimated 300,000 persons had to thumb a ride or take the family car to work earlier.

The added number of vehicles caused traffic tie-ups described by one police officer as "the worst I've ever seen."

The only picketing still under way in the Vancouver area is at the CP Rail dock in Vancouver. The CP vessel Princess of Vancouver did not sail Tuesday and it is still tied up.

The company is attempting to obtain a Supreme Court injunction to have the pickets removed.

The union said its picketing, expanded after 2¼ months of strike by 550 men against six oil companies, is designed to "bring sufficient pressure on the industry to bring about meaningful negotiations."

The wage strike against Home, Gulf, Imperial, Standard, Texaco and Shell has done little to disrupt delivery of oil products The OCAW Monday declared products of all six hot.

The transportation tieup Tuesday blew the strike up again as an issue in the British Columbia Aug. 27 election, with the NDP demanding the Social Credit government name a mediator.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said he wouldn't step in unless there was "a real emergency in the public interest." Labor Minister Les Peterson said neither side seems interested in mediation.

Meanwhile, 800 locked - out members of the Amalgamated Meatcutters Union today extended their picketing to five Lodom supermarkets in metropolitan Vancouver.

A Lodom spokesman said members of the retail clerks union ignored the pickets allowing business at the five stores to continue as usual.

However a spokesman for the bakers' union said the bakers are honoring the picket lines at stores with in-store bakeries.

The meatcutters announced Tuesday they would picket the five outlets which were closed in May when meatcutters and 3,000 grocery clerks were locked out of 103 supermarkets in the B.C. Lower Mainland.

station. Women and youngsters were busy behind the barricades making Molotove cocktails—an explosive mixture of gasoline, household detergent and sugar.

The detergent makes the gasoline spread once the bottle explodes and the sugar makes the flames stick.

The Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association, prime mover in the year-long campaign charging that Catholics suffer discrimination from the Protestant-based government, called for meetings throughout the six counties tonight.

The call was issued jointly with the leftist People's Democracy student organization to protest at what they allege to be police brutality in Londonderry and in a smaller riot in Dungannon Monday. Whether these meetings would fall under a government ban was not immediately kown.

It was clear, however, that they were likely to be the cause of further Protestant-Catholic clashes.

Tuesday, the mobs set fire to houses and shops and bombarded police with rocks and gasoline bombs. The police battled back with tear-producing smoke grenades thrown from armored cars as they smashed through street barricades. Police said the gas was a mild variety, and it had little effect on the rioters.

The fighting marked the first time in history that tear gas was used to stop demonstrators in the United Kingdom, of which Northern Ireland is a part.

While the cabinet met, Edward McAteer, leader of the Opposition Nationalist party in the Northern Ireland Parliament, called for intervention by either the United Nations or the Irish Republic.

He claimed that in the Bogside area Tuesday night a police jeep tried to run him down.

STONE A PARADE

The latest bout of religious violence was set off by Roman Catholics stoning a parade of 15,000 Protestants. The parade, which Northern Ireland's Protestant government refused to ban despite the threat of violence, commemorated the siege of Derry in 1689, when the Protestants held off the Catholic forces of King James II.

Irishmen from Canada and the United States were reported among the marchers.

Casualty figures indicated that most of the fighting was between the Catholics and the Protestant police. Of the more than 300 injured reported, 90 were police, and almost 200 civilians were treated at emergency stations set up in Bogside, the city's Roman Catholic area.

The fighting also spilled over into surrounding towns and villages but Belfast, the capital, was relatively quiet. Clashes were reported in Strabane, Dungannon, Coalisland and Newry.

At dawn a pillar of black smoke hung over Londonderry. Police said one mob ransacked a tire depot, built barricades of auto tires, then set both tires and depot afire.

As dawn approached, about 150 police took over an intersection near Bogside and challenged the Catholics barricaded in the section to come out and fight. The police rattled their clubs on their riot shields in imitation of the staccato drums which are a traditional Protestant rallying device.

AIM AT TRUCKS

Catholics and Protestants alike hurled stones at fire trucks roaring to the blazes in at least 10 buildings.

British troops stood by at two bases on the city's outskirts and at Omagh, 30 miles south. But the Ulster government did not ask them to help, and the British government in London did not intervene.

Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark is known to be reluctant to call in British troops because this might imperil Northern Ireland's local autonomy and result in the British government taking over.

Although Protestants are in the majority in Northern Ireland and responsible for its remaining part of the United Kingdom, Londonderry like the Irish Republic to the south is predominantly Catholic and has long been a centre of the religious feuding which has plagued the six Ulster counties for hundreds of years.

The current violence results from demonstrations last fall demanding an end to anti-Catholic discrimination in jobs, housing and voting regulations. The demonstrations produced counter-demonstrations by the Protestants, and before long stones and fists were flying.

It was learned in London that the British government—anxious not to commit troops to riot-control duty in the territory—had received no request from Belfast for military intervention.

Such a move, observers said, would represent a critical turn in the year-long resurgence of Protestant-Catholic strife which reflects 300 years of communal bitterness in Northern Ireland.

The march which sparked the trouble, by the Apprentice Boys of Derry, youths and men of all ages, began peacefully but a stone-throwing attack by youths near the Bogside district sparked clashes.

Police fought running battles with gangs hurling gasoline bombs and rocks in the narrow streets of Bogside.

Bernadette Devlin, 22-year-old member of the British Parliament, was at the Catholic barricades urging crowds to "unite to defend your homes."

WANT INTERVENTION

A formal statement demanding the British government suspend the Northern Ireland constitution was issued by Miss Devlin and civil rights leader Eamonn McCann. They said " . . . Northern Ireland is ungovernable under the present constitution."

The statement added: "The Royal Ulster constabulary is out of control and can no longer be considered as the force of law and order.

"This country is now in a state of chaos."

The Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association called on the Irish Republic in the South to act immediately "to prevent a great national disaster." It asked the republic to consider asking the United Nations to restore order.

It demanded immediate consultations between Ireland and Britain "to prevent a war of genocide from spreading across the north."

Independent Ireland is mainly Roman Catholic while Northern Ireland, part of the United Kingdom, is largely non-Catholic.

Oak Bay Election Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

The Liberal leader recently stated that a Liberal Government would abolish the raising of funds for hospital construction at the municipal level, would abolish regional hospital boards and would finance construction out of general revenue. This is obviously an election carrot dangled before the noses of the voters, since it avoids mentioning that the required money would still have to be raised by the Provincial Government, inevitably via increased taxation of you, the taxpayers. Also unmentioned, is the fact that Regional Boards as of July 1st, 1969, have committed themselves to $34 million borrowing and have taken on hospital debts of $28 million, which were outstanding by municipalities when the Regional Boards were formed. Under the proposed Liberal policy, the Provincial Government would be obligated to assume these debts of $62 million.

Even more important than the money is the fact that if the Provincial Government were to assume responsibility of the financing, it is inevitable that it would very soon assume 100% control of the running of local hospitals. For indeed the man who pays the piper calls the tune. It is my very firm conviction that the present high quality of service provided by our local hospitals, results from the conscientious, dedicated service of hospital board members, the vast majority of whom are now elected or appointed by the local hospital society and the local municipalities. My firm policy will always be to support the running of local hospitals by the existing boards of management, which are autonomous and devoid of control by the Provincial Government. This present, proven worthwhile system can only survive if the citizens at the municipal level continue to raise part of the financing.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The disturbance which crossed the lower mainland Tuesday dumped three quarters of an inch of rain on Vancouver. The storm track has now changed though and the system on the north coast will move eastward across northern B.C. today.

This will keep most of the cloud and rain in northern B.C. although exposed coastal areas will also remain cloudy with occasional rain or drizzle. However, there is only a thin layer of cloud over the lower mainland and the sun will break through this during the afternoon. The southern interior has even less cloud and will be sunny and warm.

Victoria — Cloudy with sunny periods Thursday. Winds light. Low tonight and high Thursday 53 and 67.

Vancouver — Small craft warning in effect for Georgia Strait. Cloudy Thursday with sunny periods. Continuing cool. Winds light occasionally southeast 15. Low tonight and high Thursday 55 and 67.

East Coast — Cloudy Thursday with sunny periods. Continuing cool. Winds light rising at times to southeast 20. Low tonight and high Thursday at Nanaimo 53 and 70.

West Coast — Cloudy with occasional light rain or drizzle Thursday except heavier showers at times in the northern part tonight and Thursday. Winds southerly 15 at times 25 in exposed areas. Low tonight and high Thursday at Tofino and Port Hardy 55 and 62.

Dominion Public Weather Office 9 a.m. forecasts. Valid until midnight Thursday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Here is my doctor's theory of a good reason for drinking less hard liquor in summer than in winter—if you are silly enough to bend your convivial elbow too far and too often at any time of the year:

When you down the amber in an undiluted portion, it is more slowly absorbed in your blood stream because alcohol tends to poison the absorption mechanism in the intestine. You may stay sober longer, but you'll probably have a bigger hangover.

In summer, drinkers dilute liquor with more ice and water. They are thirstier in summer and so they tend to drink more. The blood stream absorbs diluted liquor faster and so the drinker can get blotto faster. The idea, the doctor says, is to go easy on the liquor in any kind of weather.

'VOYAGEURS' HEAD FOR PRAIRIES

Four local senior secondary students will visit Humboldt, Sask., with the Yound Voyageur Program, a federal government travel scheme.

The boys leave Aug. 17 to join a Vancouver unit of the program and will be guests in the homes of the local residents during their one-week stay in the Saskatchewan community.

The four Victoria travellers are Mark Ferguson, 1010 Greenridge; Mark Bennett, 1914 San Pedro; William Walker, 3346 Visco; Alan Ruff, 2483 Cranmore.

Twenty-four Young Voyageur members from the Winnipeg area arrive in Victoria Tuesday, and will be billeted with students just returned from their visit to Montreal.

All Action In Final Week

By RICHARD HARWOOD and LAURENCE STERN

WASHINGTON (WP)—Congress is vacating the premises today. It has bitten the ABM bullet, the surtax bullet, the tax reform bullet and it's now time to rest and rusticate among the grass roots or in faraway vacation retreats.

It wasn't long ago that the professional crumps and diagnosticians were making the familiar lament that nothing was moving on Capitol Hill but the tourists.

"Democrats' loaf-in stalls 30 Major GOP bills," the Republican congressional campaign committee newsletter carped recently.

But last week for the first time the new 91st congress seemed to lurch into motion.

Still, there is not much grounds for exultation in the White House. There may be less than meets the eye in the victories that are being acclaimed as personal triumphs for President Nixon in Congress.

The surtax was a legacy of the Johnson administration The reform bill was a triumph for no one more than House ways and means committee chairman Wilbur Mills. The administration won the day on the ABM vote but it was Margaret Chase Smith of Main whose name got in the papers.

President Nixon's popularity has been a fragile and sometime thing. It began to sag in late June and mid-July. The Harris roll showed support for his conduct of the war slipping to 38 per cent in mid-July.

The Gallup poll showed a mild drop from 63 to 58 per cent in general approval of how the president was handling his job in the same period.

Despite the wide divergence between the two pollsters, they agreed on one thing. A downward trend in Nixon's popularity was halted by two events—the landing of two Americans on the moon and the president's trip to Asia.

Limit to Jaunts Around World

There is a limit to how many extra-terrestrial events and round-the-world jaunts a president can summon up to bolster his political ratings.

Though there were barely enough votes to save Safeguard, it was hardly a resounding victory for a new president, fresh in his power and advocating a program proclaimed to serve the national security.

On Capitol Hill there are dark mutterings among those in his own party. The common complaint is neglect at the hands of the president and his staff.

Those chafing the worst are the liberal Republicans from the urban northweast and midwest who find themselves politically more vulnerable with Richard Nixon in the White House than they did in the Lyndon Johnson era.

"The inattention we are getting from the White House runs across the board, all the way from Goldwater to Javits," one respected young Senate Republican told us recently.

"I never see anyone from that place. I wouldn't even know what they look like. They don't ask me for anything and I'm not afraid of their taking anything away. Frankly, they haven't given me anything."

'Don't Bother; They Don't Care'

During our interview an aide popped into the private office to ask if a copy of an impending speech on the ABM should be sent ot the White House.

"Oh hell, don't bother, don't bother," the Senator said resignedly. "They don't care. They'll brobably think I'm just trying to bug them."

No one expects the president to emulate Lyndon Johnson who courted, cajoled and strong-armed members of the House and Senate like a circus barker in front of a half-empty house.

But there is an impression current on Capitol Hill, within the president's party, that Nixon has immured himself in the oval office and that the men around him, the J. Walter Thompson operatives, are playing it all close to the vest.

Sen. Charles Mathias (R-MD.) publicly vented his annoyance in a recent interview with The Baltimore Sun. "Anything you do in terms of rebuilding the Republican party is useless," he said, "unless there is developed within the party a broad spirit of belonging. The spirit can be built only by open discussion, public discussion, public debate."

And so the supreme challenge facing the Nixon administration will be to expand its base of popularity. Not in outer space, but where people still live.

THAI-LAOS FEARS AIRED

By SPENCER RICH

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. Senate slashed $45 million from the military procurement bill Tuesday then plunged into a debate on U.S. military action in Thailand and Laos.

The Thailand-Laos dispute was triggered by an amendment offered by Sen. J. W. Fulbright (D—Ark.), chairman of the foreign relations committee.

As offered by Fulbright with a revision by senate armed services committee chairman John Stennis (D—Miss.), the amendment limited to $2.5 billion defence department funds that might be made available for provision of supplies and military equipment to Vietnam and local forces in Laos and Thailand.

Fulbright, in colloquy with other senators, attempted to make clear that the language of this provision should not be used to justify the employment of U.S. ground forces in a Vietnam-like conflict in Laos and Thailand.

"It would be an outrageous distortion to interpret this as an authorization for use of our forces in Laos and Thailand," Fulbright said, addressing Stennis.

The Mississippian agreed and said: "No such interpretation is expected."

At that, senator after senator arose to state their understanding that the military assisance to Laos and Thailand as provided in the bill did not authorize the use of U.S. troops for fighting there.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D—Mo.), said, "The present secretary of defence states that if the matter comes up, from the standpoint of additional effort in Laos, he believes it should be taken up with the Congress."

Symington said that Defence Secretary Melvin Laird, in his opinion, "will seek approval from Congress before committing troops to fighting in Thailand and Laos."

Despite the establishment of this legislative history, after which the Fulbright amendment was adopted by voice vote, Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R—Ky.), arose with a proposal to spell out by an amendment to the bill the point that Fulbright and Stennis had been discussing.

He said he feared that otherwise the bill might be used like the Tokin Gulf resolution to justify the use of ground forces to fight in Laos and in Thailand, where, he said, the U.S. has 45,000 troops at present.

However, a number of senators objected to writing in such language without further study.

Earlier Tupsday, Fulbright and the senate foreign relations committee clashed again with the pentagon over a U.S.-Thailand defence plan signed in 1965 by Lt. Gen. Richard G. Stillwell.

Fulbright has suggested that the plan may commit U.S. troops to more than just helping Thailand beyond the SEATO commitment, and might involve the U.S. in an internal Thailand war.

He was demanding that the defence department provide his committee with a text.

Tuesday morning, Stillwell briefed the committee on the agreement but did not bring a text. Defence officials reportedly said Fulbright could view it at the pentagon.

Emerging from the meeting, Fulbright said, "They claim it is not applicable" to an internal civil war — "I personally find it very unsatisfactory" to have to rely on a briefing instead of seeing the document itself."

Welfare Overhaul Must Wait Until 1970

Mills

WASHINGTON (WP) Rep. Wilbur D. Mills (D-Ark.), said Tuesday he supports the general concept of President Nixon's plan to overhaul the welfare system and hopes the ways and means committee can begin hearings on it fairly soon.

Mills, chairman of the committee, also said he may combine the welfare hearings to include proposals to expand social security benefits.

Mills said his main concern about the president's welfare program is the $4 billion cost, although he said he supports Nixon's plan for training the poor and encouraging them to seek employment.

Mills, whose committee must approve any legislation to carry out the president's proposals, agreed with other congressional leaders that there is no chance for final action this year.

He indicated that his committee might schedule hearings on welfare and social security while waiting for

Program Okay, But Cost Hurts

Senate action on the House-passed tax reform bill, which the Senate is not expected to dispose of until November.

Meanwhile, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.), former secretary of health, education and welfare, appaluded the welfare proposals but said they don't go far enough.

Ribicoff said he will introduce his own legislation calling for a broader mandate and substantially more funding than the $4 billion the president is requesting.

Also Tuesday, three congressmen introduced a new public income assistance program five times as costly and far more extensive than the one Nixon sent to Congress Monday.

The plan, which a could cost as much as $20 billion a year if fully implemented, would provide a basic family allowance of $3,200 annually for a family of four, doubled the amount proposed by Nixon.

The bill, sponsored by Reps. Jonathan Bingham (D-N.Y.), John Conyers Jr., (D-Mich.), and Charles Whalen (R-Ohio), would also cover individuals, childless couples and couples

$20 Billion Plan Also Promoted with grown children, as opposed to limiting coverage to families with minor children.

"We state this problem as it actually is," Conyers said, "not as some would like to believe it is."

Whalen said Nixon's endorsement of the principle of income maintenance makes it likely that the concept will win congressional approval.

Rep. Rogers Morton, chairman of the Republican national committee, asked at a press conference Tuesday about last week's cabinet meeting on the welfare proposals, said he didn't sense the reported opposition.

However, he conceded that "when you mention the $4 billion cost to the budget director (Robert Mayo), his knuckeles turn kind of white."

Morton said he personally is "all excited about the idea of putting the country back to work again."

All Systems Are Go

SELDOM HAS PREMIER BENnet exhibited such outward signs of worry, almost panic, in calling an election, as he has this time. The self-imposed three-year term of office has become familiar. But to go to the people in August, when thousands of families are still away on vacations, and thousands more desert political meetings and affairs for outdoor recreation, is most unusual. Such a choice suggests that the Social Credit leader had come to the conclusion that a delay of even a few days, to say nothing of weeks, would have been serious for his party. There is a sense of unseemly rush about the whole procedure which does nothing to present the government as being in control of the situation.

A second indication of perturbation may be seen in the wholesale promises of election goodies now on record. It is, of course, routine for candidates to list the benefits to be derived by voting for them. But Mr. Bennett has turned the election cornucopia upside down and poured out its contents in a flood. In describing the great things in store for British Columbia under a continued Social Credit government, Mr. Bennett omits two important aspects. One is the cost of all these "gifts" and how he proposes to meet it; the other is any indication of why, during the past 17 years of office, he has not inaugurated these moves, or why, with a majority in the Legislature he does not go right ahead and carry them out instead of putting the province to the expense of an election.

The list of promises is formidable. It includes increased old age pensions, increased social assistance, larger home-owner grants, increased help to prospective home buyers, increased grants to all forms of education including school boards, regional colleges, technical schools and the universities. Health services of all kinds will likewise be given greater assistance, and hospitalization will have more aid.

Even New Westminster's Royal Columbian Hospital is to get $10 millions.

Most of these items, particularly hospital and education grants, have been urged on Mr. Bennett by various spokesmen. He cannot have just heard of them. Why, then, must he call an election in order to take action on them? There are also the usual promises of roads and other improvements, and all the government ferries are to be lengthened, we suddenly learn. Mr. Bennett sounds as anxious and placating as an opposition leader trying to get into power. Is that, despite his characteristically optimistic talk, the way he really feels?

As for footing the bills, Mr. Bennett may be betting that present taxes and tax rates will produce more from a still larger volume of business activity in the next few years; or he intends to increase taxes; or he has again hidden a larger surplus in a seemingly closely balanced budget. One other eventuality is also possible. It would not be beyond the bounds of possibility—or past experience—that many of the promises would drift on, unfulfilled throughout another term of office, to be resurrected in still another election campaign as reasons for returning this aging and rather desperate administration.

A Gratuitous Blow

THE SUDDEN APPEARANCE of pickets at Victoria and Vancouver urban bus depots, halting public service without warning yesterday, appears to have been a deliberate attempt to involve the public in an oil workers' strike which until then had roused little attention.

The attention which has been aroused now is hardly favorable to the striking oil workers. This was a sweeping gesture to cause inconvenience to bus passengers and disrupt community activity, a spoiling game against a necessary utility, and it has received the general condemnation which it merited. The effects on Mr. Berger, the NDP leader who is so closely associated with the political power of the labor unions, can easily be imagined.

It might have been possible to total the votes he lost by counting the angry bus patrons standing frustrated on street corners throughout both communities. With such union friends, who, including Mr. Berger, needs enemies?

In Global Perspective

NEXT MONTH OUTSTANDING figures in letters, business and science will meet in Stockholm for a "thinkers' conference" under the auspices of the Nobel Foundation. The international gathering has been called in the wake of major it may chart directions in which growing technical progress can advances in space in the hope that create beneficial influences for the human family — or, conversely, warn it against dangers to come.

"Thinkers' conferences" are not new. Many have been held and have enjoyed both public approval and skepticism. No blueprint for global prosperity is expected from the week-long sessions. It will have served a valuable purpose, however, if those contributing to the deliberations can clarify the issues of these times and point to ways in which the tremendous strides made in technology can be turned to man's benefit.

Already one accomplishment has been noted: the readiness of outstanding men, from a large number of nations whose policies do not necessarily coincide, to join in this combined effort — a recognition in itself of the need to view the future in global perspective.

Back From the Depths

REPORTS OF DANISH FISHERmen seriously burned by mustard gas leaking from an underwater dump in the Baltic lend emphasis to the general concern expressed in recent years over this type of disposal.

It is believed that tide and possibly the action of trawlers' gear had brought the containers closer to shore and into shallower water. Deteriorating under the action of the salt water, they failed to hold the lethal gas which escaped to injure the fishermen.

Within a quarter of a century, if this explanation is correct, the products of the German war factories have returned to inflict serious harm on innocent fishermen.

From this incident arises the natural apprehension that other dumps of even more lethal material, presumably safely lodged deep in the ocean, could eventually escape to plague humanity years hence. The United States has already sunk tons of such deadly stuff, and recently the Pentagon was prevented from ditching shiploads of nerve gas. The Baltic incident strengthens protests against such dangerous pollution. There should be global regulations to forbid it.

FROM CALGARY

By JAMES H. GRAY

A Soft Answer Turneth Away Boycott

MARTYRDOM is getting to be harder and harder to come by in Alberta, as the hard core opponents of Medicare are discovering to their sorrow. The intended martyrs are being done in by the soft answer technique developed by the Strom administration. So the only dedicated tough acting opposition which has developed to Medicare is gradually withering away.

Gray

When the Alberta government did its abrupt about-face on Medicare last spring Albertans by the thousands blew their tops. And having ranted and raved they eventually calmed down and joined up. But not a small clutch of nondescript free enterprisers and professional refugees from British Medicare. Out of nowhere the Boycott Alberta Medicare — B.A.M. — came into existence.

Crusading Start

Predictably in Alberta, it began as a crusade for freedom, individual liberty and down with government by compulsion. Its leaders announced they would go to jail rather than join Medicare as ordered to do so by government billboards and newspaper ads.

The ideal of going to jail for principle had a marginal appeal for a very few people. Several mass meetings were held which drew very scanty attendance. Forms were circulated on which adherents could notify the government of their intention of boycotting Medicare. Petitions were circulated to get signatures supporting the boycott.

With the lukewarm support, the apprentice martyrs muddled around making up their minds whether to quit or go on. In the meantime a veteran of the Hitler Youth Movement came forward to organize a March for Freedom protest. He failed to attract 30 marchers so the police cancelled his parade permit.

The B.A.M.'ers hired the 2,800-seat Jubilee Auditorium in an effort to drum up interest. It managed to attract a skimpy 500. The former Nazi tried to organize another parade and got rained out. He disappeared muttering accusations that Prime Minister Trudeau was a follower of Mao Tse-Tung.

No Jail Threat

Premier Harry Strom's first reaction to the agitation gave the movement a mild boost. He announced that his government did not propose to send anybody to jail for refusing to register for Medicare. This made it a lot easier for B.A.M. to recruit potential martyrs when the faggots were so thoroughly wetted down by the premier.

The July 1 registration came and went and the leaders of B.A.M. then turned up in Edmonton with signatures of 10,000 Albertans who said they would not register for Alberta's compulsory scheme. This defiance made them liable to a fine of five dollars on conviction, which was a pretty bargain basement type of martyrdom. Nevertheless it began to look as if the boycotters were making some progress. It was an illusion.

The government simply announced that everybody in Alberta, including all the boycotters, were covered by Medicare whether they were registered or not. The non-registerers were as liable for payment of premiums as anyone else and the government would collect from them too when it got around to it.

Not by jailing anybody, however. It would proceed by civil action, establish liability in the courts, get judgment and then garnishee their wages or plaster liens on their property.

Having wages garnisheed is clearly less martyrish than going to jail. Besides many of the protesters were already registered automatically by membership in previous voluntary schemes which Medicare took over holus bolus. To become unregistered to qualify for martyrdom required dealing with both the government and running their withdrawal through their employer's personel department computers. It was almost as if regulations only allowed martyrdom during business hours. Still the B.A.M.'ers kept up their agitation but with dwindling attention.

Last week Premier Strom ran out of patience.

Look here, boys, he said in effect, if you really want martyrdom go get yourself a real Torquemada and get off my back! Go fight with Ottawa!

Even if their Alberta boycott was 100 percent effective, they would still have to pay for Medicare, through their federal taxes. If they were really serious let them stop paying their income taxes. People who think they can do that always wind up paying heavy penalties for their mistaken judgment. Medicare premiums, he said, are no different from income tax. One is as compulsory as the other.

Exit the martyrs and Boycott Alberta Medicare.

Drive Against Gas, Germs

By FRANK MANKIEWICZ and TOM BRADEN

From Washington

A BOSTON youth achieved a measure of fame the other day by getting together the materials which could make him the world's fifth nuclear power. Having assembled everything necessary from surplus stores to manufacture an intercontinental ballistic missile, he announced that all he needed was 500 men for one year to go into production.

The incident is relevant to a general proposition which scientists have been proclaiming for some time, namely, that there are no secrets to science. It is more immediately relevant to a specific warning being sounded by Congressman McCarthy of New York: that our own people and the people of all nations are endangered by the U.S. Army's insistence on the testing and storage of chemicals and germs.

Hapless Army Experience

McCarthy has been sounding the warning for some time, but the Army won't stop, and it won't stop despite its own experience which can only be described as hapless.

There was first of all the mysterious death of the sheep at Dugway Proving Ground in Utah. It took a year for the Army to admit that the sheep died from an overdose of nerve gas, resulting from faulty spraying by airplane.

Then there was the leakage from the 28,000 tons of World War II mustard-type gas while in shipment from Rocky Mountain Arsenal. It turned out that some of the cylinders in which the gas was stored were faulty. The Department of Transportation had routinely exempted the Army from the inspection which the law requires for shipment of dangerous material.

There followed Rep. McCarthy's intervention in the Army's plan to ship nerve gas across the country for burial at sea, and the revelation that American soldiers on Okinawa had been given atropine as an antidote for a minor exposure to nerve gas.

Finally, there are the mysterious deaths of farmer John H. Hall's cattle just downstream from the Army's Fort Dietrich in Maryland, where the Army admits to storing germs, and where — some congressmen believe — the Army is also testing germs in the open air.

At Fort Dietrich, too, conscientious objectors are being voluntarily inoculated with toxins to test the "incapacitating" effects of certain chemicals and germs. The Department of Defence relies upon "incapacitation" as a counterforce to the current British proposal for a flat international ban against the possession or use — under any circumstances — of all chemical and biological weapons.

Laird Argument

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird has argued that the United States needs these weapons against the event that another nation might use them first. This argument has a grave flaw — in the age of the nuclear deterrent it seems insane to respond to an attack of the plague by loosing more plague. Therefore the Defence Department's "incapacitation" theory is a last resort.

The trouble with this argument, scientists say, is that "incapacitation" for one set of human beings in one environment may mean death to another, and though the Army's incapacitating germs are toxins (dead germs), storage and testing of live germs are essential to the production of dead ones.

The war between El Salvador and Honduras last month demonstrated better than any argument the need for effective control of chemical and biological weapons, which are among the cheapest of all weapons to produce. Only the lack of modern weapons kept that war from expanding into something horrible — and chemical and biological weapons are within the capacity of either nation.

For, that matter, if we believe — as President Nixon told the Geneva Disarmament Conference last month — that the "spectre of chemical and biological warfare arouses horror and revulsion throughout the world," would we not be better off working for its restriction, rather than its expansion? And why are we giving the stuff — as Rep. McCarthy says we are — to, of all people, the Germans?

'Looking Back

From the Times, August 13, 1909.

City council will wait upon officials of the B.C. Telephone Company to discuss a policy with regard to placing wires underground. The matter is one that has been before council intermittently for two or three years. The condition upon which the company will agree to put its wires down is that the city furnish it with distributing centres in the rear of each block, with the right of access thereto.

The Debtor Way of Life

The importance of this rushed, holiday-time, power-packed election, cannot be set aside. It is, in my view, a vital turning point in the history of British Columbia.

The precipitous action of the Social Credit government, plus the 'scare tactics', plus the flood of 'success literature' with which we have been swamped by the premier, is clear evidence of a grave concern in the administration.

Attitudes change with power, and "absolute power corrupts." I am not implying corruption (as usually understood), but suggesting decomposition as defined in the concise Oxford Dictionary. It seems clear to me that, with the passage of time, our premier has given less and less thought to the people of this wonderful province, and more and more to the "magnates." By so doing, he has become a dictator rather than a leader.

One cannot expect him in his busy days to give much thought to such past events as the great sacrifice of the Canadian Forces at Dieppe. They, the brave dead, cannot speak, and even the echo of their voices are dimmed by the flight of the years. But would they tacitly have accepted the infiltration into our provincial parks by industries that, not only destroy, but cause pollution?; the feeble response to lawlessness by our Legislature?; the almost complete disregard for our children by failing to instil into them a spirit of leadership, loyalty and love of country? Would they have endorsed without strong criticism the number of industrial disputes that are placing an unjustified strain upon our economy? Would they have tolerated a situation where "monoply" is raising it's ugly head, and where the rich increase their wealth while the poor must depend so much upon welfare? Would they not demand to know why it is, that debt is encouraged by the system under which we are destined to live, and nervous breakdown is so tragically common?

We read, if we have the patience, all about "the good life" and the vast reserves of capital to maintain it so; then why issue more bonds to aid "Hydro and Power? What in truth, is the measure of the provincial per capita debt.

This debtor way of life is utterly stupid and deceptive. When the inevitable recession starts to flow, we will have no sand bags for the peeling dykes.

For these, and many other reasons, I look forward to a dramatic change of power on August 27th, my vote going whole heartedly to the New Democratic Party. A weighty challenge is imperative on all counts. —Philip C. Livingston, Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh, Diploma in Public Health, Maple Bay.

Suitable for Circus

It would appear from the front page article, "Personality vs Organization" in the Victoria Daily Times of August 11, 1969, by Times reporter Jim Hume, that Mr. Frank Ney of Nanaimo is well qualified to join the Bennett Circus.

His ability to organize bathtub races and a reputation as a "successful" realtor would certainly make him a valuable addition to the provincial Legislature. There, he would be able to fit in admirably with other members of the Bennett Circus, such as, Gaglardi, Capozzi, Tisdalle, Bruch, Skillings and many others not worth mentioning.

A vote for a proven, dedicated and experienced candidate, Mr. David Stupich, would be a "nay" vote for Mr. Ney. Let us hope so!—Ian H. Campbell, 1595 Rockland.

Aberhart Model

Premier Bennett recently commented admiringly: "Without William Aberhart there would be no Social Credit." I agree. As the Aberhart version of Social Credit was the product of perhaps the most despicable religio-political swindle in the history of Canada, one must assume that Mr. Bennett's admiration extends to the odious slandering and "name-calling" of opponents practised by the late Aberhart. This seems to be indicated by the religion-coated hate-mongering introduced by him in calling the NDP "Godless Socialists."

It is surprising that up to now the opposition parties have failed to deal appropriately with this ethical obscenity invented and introduced by Premier Bennett. Their disinclination may be influenced by the proverbial admonition: "Answer not a fool according to his folly lest thou be like unto him," and the hope that the electors will rightly evaluate Bennett's mud-slinging and indicate their contempt for it at the polls. I also hope so; but I wonder, because slanderous name-calling has been a standard tactic of the Socreds — and it has "worked" for them. —J. J. Zubick, 4982 William.

"The Good Life"

Pathetic indeed is the "struggle" of both the NDP and Liberal candidates to find or demonstrate any quarrel with Socred governance of B.C. As they speak on their platforms (without a "platform") they hastily promise to uphold the householders grant, keep medicare intact, investigate pollution and all in all they boost Socred achievements while anxiously pleading with us to commit political suicide, by changing our present government.

The fields of sport, education, welfare, transportation et al are under constant surveillance towards "excellence," and we are further endowed with treasure beyond belief, envied internationally and well aware of our good fortune — and the opposition asks us to change all this?—Kathleen M. Worthington-Lake, 2578 Eastdown.

'Society Must Make Choices' Says PM Government Can't Solve All Problems

By PETER NEWMAN

When you come to Ottawa from Outer Canada (which is anywhere beyond a six-block radius of Parliament Hill) the capital has a curiously remote quality, especially now in high summer when it lies hot, green, somewhere antique under the shimmering sun, its political fervor stifled since the MPs abandoned it to the tourists.

But then you're conducted into the power-centre of this political fortress in the East Block offices of Pierre Trudeau and his immediate retinue, and you suddenly realize that as far as they're concerned, the city is all vitality and action and change.

★

Probably more than ever before in our history, the government of Canada is being run by one man and the East Block office Pierre Trudeau uses between parliamentary sessions turns out to be an extraordinarily exciting place to be.

This is not, god knows, because of its furnishings, upper echelon civil service standard far less pretentious in total effect than the office of any smalltime university president.

What creates the excitement, what gives the office a sense of aliveness, is the presence of its occupant who, no matter how often he's observed in public, watched on television, caught open-mouthed and flower-buttoned by press cameras, is still something of a surprise when viewed in person.

Trudeau appears smaller, more fragile and yet more commanding than you expect; and while in the media he is a man constantly in motion, jumping bannisters, dodging (or slugging) picketers, swimming, hopping onto platforms, in person he is incredibly still.

The overwhelming impression of the man is is that he's thinking and that the physical Trudeau is a kind of carefully looked after carrying case for a fabulous brain machine.

If it was true that John Diefenbaker often "thought with his heart," it's equally true that Pierre Trudeau frequently "feels with his mind."

Except for his bi-monthly publie outbursts, such as his slugfest in Vancouver last weekend, his emotions remain remote and inaccessible. But his mind is an open city, unfettered by political dogma, committed only to a kind of functionalism which measures policies strictly by how well they'll work.

It was this kind of non-ideological response which he gave to my question about his use of closure to impose the guillotine rule (75-C) on future parliamentary debates.

Democracy in the past, he claimed, has failed for one simple reason: it wasn't efficient enough.

★

"Why did Fascism arise in Italy, Nazism in Germany and Gaullism in France? Not because some political party exaggerated its power and used Parliament to squash the opposition but because in these countries the judgment was made that parliament couldn't settle the issues fast enough.

"In other words, Nazism, Fascism and Gaullism arose exactly for the reasons we're trying to correct by making parliament more efficient."

Trudeau would like somehow to draw out of the society he's charged with governing a true picture of what it really wants, by presenting the electorate with the facts then challenging them to make the relevant choices.

"We need to tell people," he said, "okay—if we want to have portable fridges on the beaches and portable television sets and so on, that's fine but maybe we can't swim in the water because its polluted.

"But if we want clean water, we'll have to pay higher taxes which means we won't have our portable television sets. Now what will people choose? Perhaps they'll choose television sets.

★

"But at least they won't say then that the government can't do anything about pollution. They'll say we don't want it to do anything about pollution."

"I'm suggesting we have to explain this to people," Trudeau went on, "explain that they must make choices . . . it's a sense of helplessness which destroys society. It's the feeling that everything is out of control.

"But government can't really solve the problems by itself . . . what preserves free societies is the facing of difficulties by all its citizens."

I asked the Prime Minister about his reactions to the American moon walk. Did he think the kind of excitement and competition involved in the peace race might eventually transform it into a substitute for war?

"Well," he mused, "it's a feat that has to stand and fall on its own merits. It's something which doesn't preclude other things. In other words, we can go to the moon and still not solve the problem of wars. We can abstain from doing that and still not solve the problem of poverty."

"I had an argument yesterday with a person who was telling me, my gosh why should they go to the moon when there are so many poor people.

"Well, why should we have museums and why should we have writers and artists and painters and dancers when there are so many poor people? Shouldn't we use all our resources to eradicate poverty rather than to teach people how to play the flute?

"The answer is of course that the spinoffs from technological invention like the spinoffs from symphony concerts are extremely valuable.

"But there's a danger if people begin saying if we can go to the moon we can do anything. This will create conceptions which we won't easily be able to fulfill.

★

"Going to the moon proves that men's minds working together can build pretty perfect mechanisms, but it doesn't prove that we've made one inch more progress into the exploration of man's mind itself.

"So to go back to your question, the way to eradicate war is not going to the moon. It's understanding what happens inside man's brain which makes him aggressive and makes him want to fight."

Could he tell me what had gone on inside his own brain since his elevation to power? Was he becoming arrogant and remote?

"Yeah, well I'm still myself," he said, "I enjoy reading these (official papers on his desk) and I enjoy answering hecklers and I enjoy sitting down in a farmer's kitchen and asking him what he does with the other six months in the year, but I am still myself and I urge you to believe me.

"I'm not being forced to do anything by the people around me . . . it's not true that I'm becoming an automat just working sixteen hours a day.

"As a statement of fact, I feel just as human and sometimes a little more tired but that is easily corrected by a long weekend. I'm getting a hell of a lot of fun out of it and I hope you're having a lot of fun in Toronto too."

The Case for a Press Council in Canada

By WILLIAM LEE

(Mr. Lee is a former assistant to Paul Hellyer and is now in private business. He wrote this article for The Globe and Mail.)

A few weeks ago I innocently caused The Globe and Mail to have an acute case of editorial apoplexy by suggesting to the 1969 Canadian Managing Editors' Conference that they give some thought to creating a Press Council in Canada.

Why did I advance this brash — but not too original — suggestion? Well, from long experience in military, government and now business it is my clear impression that too many Canadians believe that the press isn't doing the responsible job it should be doing in keeping the public accurately and fully informed.

In fact, I have heard many people blame the press for contributing to the various "communication gaps" that exist in our society — those between young and old, rich and poor, East and West, the private and the public sectors, French and English.

Whether it is true may be debatable but the fact remains a lot of people in all parts of society, of all political hues, think it is true. That alone should be enough to stir the press into some sort of self-examination.

Supported by All

It was interesting to me that every one of the other panelists — all members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery — at the Managing Editors Conference supported the need for a Press Council.

Charles Lynch, Chief of Southam News Services, said we need a council because "publishers and editors are losing control over what goes into their papers due to the increasing independence and irreverence of young writers who insist upon having their views on that news printed regardless of what their bosses think."

Mr. Lynch advanced as another reason "the lack of any independent agency before whom alleged transgressions of journalistic ethics can be tried."

As an example, he mentioned his report on the retirement statement of former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker at a closed Press Gallery testimonial dinner and his subsequent "trial" and suspension by the executive of the Parliamentary Press Gallery. Mr. Lynch felt strongly that this procedure was wrong.

Said he: "The Parliamentary Press Gallery is a highly competitive jungle in which journalists do not have a professional respect for each other. Therefore, it is not right for my competitors to judge me.

"I would have felt much better to appear before an independent tribunal — a Press Council — which could objectively look into the ethics, accuracy and appropriateness of a journalist's actions."

Douglas Fisher, syndicated columnist and former NDP member of Parliament, was equally emphatic about the need.

"The citizen simply isn't getting a fair shake with the biased news coverage he gets in his newspapers," said Mr. Fisher.

Protect Status Quo

"A very small number of men control the vast majority of our papers and their main interest is in making money and protecting the status quo, including government privileges such as mail rates. It's high time the citizen — whether he be in government or private indistry — had a Press Council to whom he could direct legitimate complaints just as they do in Sweden and Britain."

Arthur Blakely, veteran Press Gallery representative of the Montreal Gazette, saw a Press Council filling another requirement.

"At the very least it would act as a safety valve for everyone concerned — the reporter who thinks his copy is being mangled by the desk; the politician, civil servant, or private citizen who feels he has been wronged by irresponsible reporting. I don't see how the press could lose by having a Press Council," said Mr. Blakely.

Low Esteem

The panel moderator, Clark Davey, of The Globe and Mail, did not declare himself on the subject of a press council.

He did say with the other speakers that the press was held in low esteem by just about everyone in Ottawa and this, along with disenchantment with editorial policy, made it increasingly difficult to keep staff in the Press Gallery bureau.

Said Mr. Davey: "Money is part of the problem — there are many higher paying jobs available — but of greater importance is respect. The young able parliamentary reporter doesn't feel he is respected by the people with whom he is in contact and he places much of the blame on unreasonable requests and attitudes of the newspaper home office."

It seems to me the arguments for a Press Council far outweigh the arguments against. It could be a watchdog for the preservation of freedom of the press, a vital consideration in our type of society.

It could also help to free the citizen from maltreatment by the press through faulty reporting or irresponsible editorializing.

A Press Council consisting of newspapermen and lay representatives, and with a highly respected independent authority as chairman, could contribute to raising professional standards of journalism in this country.

Credit Where Due

It might even encourage newspapers to temper their preoccupation with what is wrong, rotten or violent in our society, and spend a little more time on what is right.

Not that newspapers should abandon their responsibility to expose wrong-doing, conflict and controversy.

But just a tiny bit more credit where credit is due might encourage more good people to enter or stay in public service and make more people feel that all is not wrong with our Western society.

Gloom and doom are all very well, but a little more attention to what is positive and constructive wouldn't do any harm.

Another obvious advantage of the Press Council would be to the press itself. The current broad disenchantment with newspapers allows politicians, civil servants, labor leaders and businessmen to freely blame the "irresponsible press" for any adverse stories that appear.

With the existence of a Press Council, people making such complaints would have to be a little more careful with such sweeping castigations.

The main argument against a Press Council is that it would tend to curb the free-wheeling, irreverent approach of the newspaperman and eventually lead to a controlled press or managed news. I don't buy this.

If the newspapers took the lead in setting it up, they could ensure through its composition and terms of reference that the Press Council would bar any such tendencies.

Yet another factor that argues for such a body is that, to all intents and purposes, one already exists for the radio and television industry.

Not that I am suggesting a government-appointed regulatory agency for the press. I think this is neither wise nor necessary.

But if the newspapers don't make a move they may well end up with some form of governmental watchdog. Government involvement in all aspects of our life is the rule rather than the exception these days.

In today's atmosphere of concern over communications breakdowns and justice in society, it seems to me the argument in favor of establishing a Press Council or a series of area Press Councils is overwhelming — for the good of the newspapers and their staffs as well as the citizen.

You Can Bite an Apple But It Could Be Sour

By ART STOTT

While Victoria discusses the pros and cons of an isolation chamber in a special school for disturbed children — a place where a youngster can calm down when he becomes violently upset or upsetting — the reaction in our house is unconventional. Serious consideration of the device is destroyed by recollection of a personal incident.

Stott

A family member, now adult, recalls being locked in a dark closet for disciplinary purposes. By coincidence the closet contained a box of apples being stored for winter consumption. The child improved the unshining hour by taking a bite out of each apple. Spoilage was heavy that season.

The incident lends a wry humor to the issue of solitary confinement for children as far as we are concerned. We don't approach the subject in the approved spirit.

★ ★ ★

Nor have we an attitude that would be applauded by the B.C. Teachers Federation toward apples with bites taken out of them. The symbolism, in our case, does not evoke the image of a political candidate so concerned with education that he'll place a picture of an apple with a bite out of it in his publicity material. Our "thing" about bitten-into apples quite improperly reverts to the kid in the closet tableau — a childish rebellion against an imposed discipline.

It is my opinion that the teaching profession or union — depending on the circumstances in which teachers find themselves — has every right to take political action on education. Teachers, to me, are not second-class citizens.

They have as much right as the next person to try, conjointly, to improve their wages and working conditions or to attempt to further the educational processes. I believe they are honest in the latter efforts and I accept the argument that they have a particular knowledge that only teachers can acquire on certain facets of education. They should be heard — and heeded in all cases in which that special knowledge is of public value.

It is not my belief, however, that being teachers automatically extends to them omniscience. Nor do I believe, any more than they do, that the teachers' position on education is infallible.

By their current campaign they run certain risks, which they are undoubtedly prepared to take. They establish themselves as a special faction in the political realm and, as a faction, they do not necessarily speak for the public at large. They are taxpayers who, because of their jobs and the experience they derive from their work, are prepared to see a more generous share of taxes devoted to what they consider improvements in education. They are certainly sincere in trying to make the system more effective. It is probably only incidental spin-off that they stand to derive specific benefits from greater educational expenditure than do other taxpayers not employed in educational fields.

They can argue properly that society here is not spending enough on education from kindergarten to graduate studies. No one, it might be noted, has said how much enough is. But the home-owning taxpayer can also argue that education, financed on its present basis, is costing him too much, that he can't carry any more.

It seems to me that in the weird mixture of over-simplification and contortion that emerges during a political campaign, these respective arguments—which are not beyond reconciliation—could easily develop into polarized opposition. At the one extreme you could have apple-biting candidates asking the voters: "Do you want to continue starving our schools and robbing our children of their rights?" At the other you could have a candidate asking: "Do you want to be taxed right out of your home?" The "brains or blacktop" alternative isn't quite as authentic as some would make it appear. Conceivably there may be a judicious mixture of both though my personal inclination runs to favoring the "brains."

★ ★ ★

In practical politics, certain other imponderables arise from apple-type campaigns. The assumption is that the teachers and their supporters will withhold their votes from candidates who don't display the apple. Most intelligent candidates could use the apple and rationalize their concept of improving education in a way which would leave the implied promise in the symbol open to a number of interpretations. There is a convolution in politics which makes "campaign promises" almost synonymous with equivocation. But beyond that, as long as the secret ballot is used, who's to know how a teacher, or anyone else votes, once he slips behind the curtain to mark his cross?

Since we're not in Eden, the "forbidden fruit" characteritic doesn't apply in the present campaign. So whoever wishes to may bring an apple to the teacher — and hope, perhaps, that Teacher's right.

ECM Suspends Joint Policy On Agriculture

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL

BRUSSELS (WP)—The six nation European Common Market at dawn Tuesday took its most backward step since its foundation in 1958 by suspending its joint agricultural policy for up to two years.

Emerging from the 18-hour meeting made necessary by French devaluation, Gunther Harkort of Germany spoke of the "burial" of the farm policy which had been the Common Market's most significant achievement towards still far-off political and economic unity.

"We took so much time," the secretary of state of the German foreign ministry said, "because we wanted to put the tombstone in place so that it is possible for a resurrection to take place in a reasonable time."

But observers believed such a resurrection would depend on a complete overhaul of the present policy which had produced mountains of high-price food surpluses at a growing cost estimated to reach $6 billion in a decade.

Essentially, the meeting of agriculture and finance ministers temporarily released France from her obligation to automatically raise farm prices in francs to the full extent of the devaluation.

PREVENT WINDFALL

The exemption was granted to prevent French farmers from reaping windfall profits that would have increased inflationary pressures and compromised the benefits of devaluation.

Instead, France, the Common Market's biggest exporter and producer of half its aggregate agriculture, was "isolated" from her five partners — Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

At France's borders a complicated system of export taxes and import subsidies covering some 200 farm products immediately went into effect following the Tuesday decision.

The exemptions will maintain French farm prices at their pre-devaluation level for one crop year.

There is a possibility that French prices would increase to reflect part or all of the full brunt of devaluation in the second crop year. By the beginning of 1972 French prices must be back in line with her partners.

TOUGHEN CONDITIONS

The Dutch, who filibustered for seven hours Monday night and Tuesday morning, succeeded in toughening the conditions the Common Market commission or executive EEC body had been willing to accord France.

Specifically, Dutch insistence was instrumental in requiring the commission to prepare studies by Nov. 30 on how the compensatory French regulations are functioning and also on alternative measures.

The Dutch favored alternative measures — including domestic French taxation — on the grounds they would avoid the return to past practices of purely nationalistic border taxes.

Behind this condition lay fears that the border taxes would not be able to prevent French farm production — and surpluses — from soaring.

France gets the lion's share of payments from the Common Market farm price support fund with Germany paying most of the costs for subsidizing French surpluses.

BARGAINING VICTORY

Insisting on such rapid review — and empowering ministerial meeting before the year's end to rule on the commission's findings — the Dutch also gained a major bargaining victory for the future.

Their refusal to say what might happen after the present crop year puts them in a strong position to force French concessions on overhauling the whole farm support system and the veto on British entry.

All three issues will now come up for discussions in the fall.

The French government has insited that agreement with her present five partners on a definitive new system for financing farm products was the precondition for letting the British in.

Now the fact that France has been granted the first across-the-board exemption since the uniform farm policy was initiated in 1962 weakens French arguments against giving new members special treatment during a transition period.

MOOD OF DISARRAY

But whatever gains France's weakness provides, partisans of British entry are sobered by the mood of disarray which could dissuade all present members from tackling the disorganizing initial effect of accepting newcomers.

Adding to the gloom are fears of further isolated parity changes among present members, specifically the possibility of a Belgian franc devaluation and a German mark revaluation.

In theory, at least, any devaluating country might have to be "isolated" in similar fashion unless an overall parity change of all members was involved.

However, such an overall parity change might produce the unanimity necessary to lower the so-callled unit of account, sometimes called the "European half money" because it is the nearest thing the common market has to a common currency.

About the only virtue in what was universally considered a major setback to the still distant goal of total political and economic integration was the fact that French farm prices had been prevented from rising immediately.

DRASTIC ACTION

But within two years they will rise again, thus encouraging such large surpluses that some Common Market officials hope all member states will be obliged to take drastic action.

Basically the commission would like to abandon its present system, which provides limitless subsidies for limitless production, in favor of lower price structures and controlled production.

A plan, drawn up by Common Market farm commissioner Sicco Mansholt, outlines remedial action to be taken over the next ten years, but its $10 billion price tag has scared away any firm commitment by member states.

FRENCH AGRICULTURE MINISTER Jacques Duhamel leaves marathon session of European Common Market in Brussels Tuesday after winning concessions from member countries as result of French franc devaluation. Market's Council of Ministers decided to suspend its uniform farm price policy for one year to cushion devaluation effects.

Security Council Hears Israel-Lebanon Quarrel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN Security Council meets today to discuss the fighting along the Israeli-Lebanese border.

Lebanon complained Tuesday of the Israeli air strike the day before on the Mount Hermon region in southeast Lebanon. The Lebanese claimed that 16 Israeli planes hit six villages in the area, killing four civilians and injuring three more.

Israel a few hours later went to the council charging an increase in guerrilla attacks on Israel from Arab guerrillas based in Lebanon. Israel authorities said Monday's air attack hit seven guerrilla camps in reprisal for "terrorist acts" by Arab guerrillas operating from Lebanese territory.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir warned the Lebanese to curb the Arab guerrillas operating from their soil.

UNWILLING TO ACT

"If the Lebanese authorities do not deal with them, we shall have to do it," Mrs. Meir told reporters in Jerusalem.

Israel claims that about 500 Arab guerrillas have been operating from southeast Lebanon since 1968. The Lebanese claim the guerrillas get their support from Syria, but the Beirut government has been unwilling to curb them because of sympathy for them among Palestine refugees and others in Lebanon.

Meanwhile, hostilities continued along Israel's borders.

Arab artillery fired on two Israeli settlements near the Lebanese border early today, Israeli Army officers said. There were no reports on casualties or damage.

Near the Jordanian border Tuesday, Arab guerrillas attacked an Israeli Army post in the Beisan Valley with small arms, mortars and bazookas. The Israelis said they returned the fire, and there were no Israeli casualties.

An Egyptian spokesman in Cairo reported that several Egyptian reconnaissance patrols had crossed the Suez canal ceasefire line for the last three nights and clashed with "Israeli positions and armored units." He said the patrols "destroyed several enemy tanks and armored cars" and "returned safely to their bases."

S. Africa Ordered Out Of Territory

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—The United Nations Security Council Tuesday gave South Africa until Oct. 4 to end its administration of South-West Africa or face possible UN sanctions.

Approving a resolution submitted by African, Asian and Latin American members, the council condemned the South African government for refusing to comply with the UN request in March that it withdraw immediately from the mineral-rich territory.

South Africa, which was given a mandate over South-West Africa by the now-defunct League of Nations after the First World War has refused to give up sovereignty over the former Germany colony and has defied previous UN resolutions to this effect.

The council called on all states to refrain from all dealings with the South African government "purporting to act on behalf of the territory of Namibia" the native name for South-West Africa.

Refugee Aid

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—Iraq has made a $100,000 contribution to the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees in the Middle East, it was announced Tuesday.

Biggest Bank Handles Alaska Oil Billions

JUNEAU, Alaska (Reuters) — The Bank of America, the world's largest bank, Tuesday pulled off one of the biggest deals in banking history when it was designated manager of the funds Alaska will receive next month from the sale of oil leases on the state's north slope.

Announcing the agreement, Gov. Keith H. Miller said the Bank of America was chosen after negotiations with many leading banks and financial institutions.

The amount of money to be raised in the sale of oil leases Sept. 10 is estimated at up to $3,000,000,000.

Under terms of the agreement, the bank will invest the funds in United States treasury securities. Under Alaskan law, the state can invest its money only in government securities or deposit in commercial banks which pledge the required legal collateral.

The details of the agreement published did not disclose the amount of money involved, nor was there any indication in which area of the government securities market the funds would be invested.

Newspapers Hit By Cable Break

LONDON (Reuters) — A cable breakdown here cut news agency and newspaper communications today.

Several Reuters overseas services and other world news agencies were affected intermittently.

The break was in the Fleet Street area and a post office spokesman said it may have been caused by flooding or by excavations. An emergency operation was launched to locate and repair the break.

30 DAYS DRIFTING DEEP NEAR END FOR PICCARD

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—The 30-day adventure that has taken Jacques Piccard on a silent 1,500-mile drift up the Gulfstream in a mini-sub is scheduled to end Thursday far off the coast of Maine.

●

Project spokesmen here said Piccard's Grumman-built sub "Ben Fanklin" was scheduled to begin making its ascent from 1,000 feet about 6 a.m. Thursday.

By noon, Piccard and five scientists who made the underwater drift up the warm, northward flowing Gulfstream will be breathing fresh air for the first time since July 14, when the submarine began its voyage off West Palm Beach.

The Ben Franklin was expected to surface some 600 miles south of Nova Scotia. Piccard and his crew will then transfer to a Coast Guard cutter for a two-day trip to Portland, Me. A surface vessel that accompanied the voyage will tow the sub to shore.

●

Piccard and his crew, which included a NASA scientist and two U.S. Navy oceanographers, encountered no serious trouble during the Gulfstream drift.

A project spokesman said the warm current proved to be more turbulent than expected.

Union Rejects Devaluation Explanation

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government today explains its post-devaluation measures to leaders of the second and third largest labor unions in the country after unsatisfactory discussions with leaders of the largest.

Labor Minister Joseph Fontanet met Tuesday with heads of the communist-led Confederation Generale du Travail. Its secretary, Jean-Louis Moynot, warned the government would be in trouble if it didn't stop its "sterile chit-chat" and get down to serious negotiations.

Fontanet meets today with representatives of the Socialist Force Ouvriere and the CFDT Federation, the second and third largest unions.

Moynot wrote today in the Communist newspaper L'Humanite that there was an "explosive phenomenon" in the anger felt by workers deprived of their buying power by the devaluation of the franc by 12½ per cent Friday.

He warned the government would be in trouble from workers returning to their jobs after summer vacations if it did not go beyond Fontanet's position.

"Nothing we have heard is the kind of thing to calm our fears," Moynot told reporters after the meeting.

CALLS FOR STRUGGLE

The meeting was held Tuesday after a statement from the Communist party calling for a struggle to defend the purchasing power of the workers.

Fontanet also discussed the devaluation with leaders of the white collared Workers Federation. Their leader, Corentin Calvez, said after the meeting that all Fontanet told him was that "he thinks prices are only going to rise by 0.7 per cent."

But despite the threats of forthcoming trouble, observers noted that the union leaders gave no hints of what action they might be considering against the government.

Meanwhile, the franc closed in a slightly weaker position than Monday. Dealers reported the market was erratically active and the Bank of France was having to give only slight support to the devalued currency.

Tuesday's closing franc rate of 5.54650 to 5.4850 against the U.S. dollar meant that more francs had to be paid for one dollar than at Monday's closing rate of 5.54350.

But stock prices remained well above the pre-devaluation level and dealers said the fall Tuesday was logical with people selling to make a profit.

Commonwealth to Study Capital-Raising Proposal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the financially-troubled Commonwealth Trust Co. group of companies will be asked Friday to consider a proposal to raise $2,500,000 in new capital, a spokesman for the company managing Commonwealth's affairs said Tuesday.

John Richardson, vice-president of Phoenix Management Services Ltd., which took over last month from government-appointed receiver A. D. Peter Stanley, made the statement in reply to Premier Bennett, who said Monday he doubted Commonwealth could qualify for a government loan.

The premier said Commonwealth has not complied with the terms of legislation under which it could qualify for a $3,000,000 government loan and "it looks to me they never will comply."

Under the legislation, Commonwealth must raise $3,000,000 itself to qualify for the loan.

"Certainly to date the capital required has not been subscribed as was originally contemplated by the shareholders," Mr. Richardson said. "However, under the terms of the contract, Phoenix will advise the directors of Commonwealth on Aug. 15 that they consider a financing to be feasible."

He did not elaborate.

Meanwhile, distribution of $5,760,600 to shareholders of two Commonwealth mutual funds placed in receivership last December was authorized in the British Columbia Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Gordon Rae approved an application by Mr. Stanley, receiver of Diversified Income Shares, series A and B, to turn the money over to the trustee, Commonwealth Trust, for distribution to 3,930 shareholders.

Largest amount to be received by a shareholder is $100,000, but average will be about $2,000.

Total amount in the fund was $7,400,000 but there is a holdback of $1,640,000 relating to securities where investigation is not complete.

Lewes River

Lewes River Mines Ltd. plans to spend $135,000 in exploration work on its Whitehorse copper prospect, on which surface work has been done.

To finance its plans, the company is offering 260,000 shares at 65 cents per share.

Consignment Gas Sales Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — W. O. Twaits, president of Imperial Oil Ltd., said Tuesday he "can't understand" the concern of the federal restrictive trade practices commission over consignment selling.

A commission report recommended that a court order prohibit continuation of such action by gasoline dealers.

It termed the practice "detrimental to the public interest." The commission found that a group of Sudbury service station operators acted in concert to raise gasoline prices in their area in 1964. But rather than recommending prosecution of the operators, it said continuation of such actions as consignment selling by dealers to control retail gasoline prices should be prohibited by court order.

Twaits said consignment selling is entered into voluntarily by dealers when they need to protect their profit margins. The company takes over the dealers' inventory and pays him a commission.

In return, the company sets both the wholesale and the retail gasoline price.

"It has nothing to do with price-fixing," Twaits said. "Imperial's consignment selling had nothing to do with the total situation in Sudbury."

Twaits said consignment selling is not a large part of Imperial's selling in Ontario, although he could not give definite figures.

R. J. Benson, co-ordinator of retail sales for Shell Canada Ltd., said Shell, also named by the commission as selling on consignment, does not favor the practice.

"It's not the normal method of selling gasoline," he said. "We use it only when the price situation is such that dealers' profit margins must be protected."

Benson said there should be some technique available to the industry to protect its dealers. One method, already considered by the oil companies, would be to grant dealers allowances. But Benson said this conflicts with the Combines Act, which prohibits vendors from selling to competing dealers in an area.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Home Oil

Home Oil Co. Ltd. had net earnings of $2.25 million or 34 cents a share during the first half of 1969, compared with $2.3 million or 45 cents a share in the first six months last year.

The earnings were on a cash flow of $6 million, practically unchanged from 1968.

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd. had a net profit of $8.68 million or 41 cents a share during the first half of this year compared with $7.58 million or 36 cents a share in the first half of 1968.

Profits included a net gain of $1.69 million from the sale of investments.

Sales of all products during the first six months were $42.7 million an increase of 12 per cent from 1968. Cash generated from operations increased 7 per cent to $15.5 million or 74 cents a share.

Takeover Fails

Northwest Industries Inc. has ended a months-long attempt to take over the B. F. Goodrich Co.

The Chicago-based conglomerate said Monday it would not extend the tender offer made in January to shareholders of the rubber firm. The offer expired Monday.

The decision was based on current market conditions, a Northwest spokesman said.

Highland Valley

A recent rights offering by Highland Valley Mines Ltd. has netted $90,000 for the company treasury. It will cover an exploration program estimated to cost $80,000.

Line cutting, soil sampling, stripping, and induced polarization magnetometer survey is under way at the prospect.

Additional public financing will be carried out soon, the company said.

Jefferson Lake

Jefferson Lake Petrochemicals of Canada Ltd. had a net income of $2 million for the six months ended June 30, a decrease of $412,861 from the same period a year earlier.

Gross revenue also decreased to $4.8 million from $5.5 million in 1968.

Brokerage Firms Suffer Lean Days

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaner days have fallen on Wall Street brokerage firms which grew fat on soaring commissions from record trading volume in 1967 and early 1968.

Brokers' profits have fallen as stock market prices and trading volume declined sharply and operating costs ballooned.

As a result, retrenchment is the present policy in the securities industry with employees of some firms being laid off, some branch offices being closed and peripheral activities being trimmed.

The high-level of prosperity attained by Wall Street during the period of extremely heavy trading was, in part, the cause of its current plight. To handle the overwhelming crush of paperwork resulting from the avalanche of market transactions, brokers expanded their staffs and invested heavily in computers, pushing up the cost of doing business.

The ranks of employees processing securities for member firms of the New York Stock Exchange increased 36 per cent last year.

PROFITS DECLINED

But, the exchange reported recently, brokers' profit margin declined in 1968 to 4.7 per cent of gross commission income from 7.2 per cent in 1967. The 1968 profit ratio was the lowest since 1964.

The exchange said expenses of handling commission business in all markets rose 35 per cent last year while gross income on commission business increased 29 per cent.

Pressure on brokers' profits has increased this year. Since reaching its 1969 high of 968.85 on May 14, the Dow Jones industrial average has slumped about 150 points. Trading dwindled with the total of 6,680,000 shares traded Monday being the lowest in almost two years.

For example, Bache and Co., the second largest brokerage firm, said it earned only $13,237 in the three months ended last April 1 on revenues of $35,000,000.

Francis I. duPont and Co., among the largest of brokerage firms, laid off between 100 and 200 employees and will close eight of its 111 branches. The company had increased its staff to 5,700 persons from 2,800 in the last year.

WILL CLOSE 10

Another sizable firm, McDonnell and Co., said it would sell or close 10 of its 26 branch offices and sell its advisory concern which manages McDonnell Fund, Inc., a mutual fund with $30,000,000 assets.

McDonnell has sold one of its three memberships on the New York Exchange and has obtained new capital.

Goodbody and Co., a major broker employing 2,000 persons in New York City, has decided to cut personnel to the level of last Jan. 1. A spokesman said this would be a reduction of somewhat under 10 per cent.

Other firms which have announced cuts in personnel and branches include Blair and Co., H. Hentz and Co., Weis, Voison, Cannon, Inc., Dempsey-Tegeler and Co., Nuveen Corp., and Thomson and McKinnon. Just how many of the 650 New York exchange member firms are cutting down isn't known.

'Peace' Stocks Offered

NEW YORK (AP) — A financial management firm is offering a peace-oriented portfolio for investors with qualms about making money from bombs, napalm, chemical weapons and fighter planes.

The firm, Thomas O'Connell Management and Research Corp. of Hingham, Mass., says peace stocks are not only plentiful but many have excellent prospects for growth.

O'Connell said it started to develop the portfolio two months ago when a Boston-area synagogue asked for investment ideas that didn't involve putting money into the military industrial field.

Financial analyst Alice R. Tepper said more than 80 per cent of the country's estimated 30,000 publicly held companies are not members of the complex. Non-members include such hot Wall Street prospects as mobile home firms, manufacturers of anti-pollution equipment and urban development firms.

WATCH US GROW

This second issue is for the construction of phase two of our five-phase program, for the development of up to twenty-five major trailer courts and luxury Mobile home courts in B.C. The 2nd phase of development will be for the construction of luxury courts in the areas of Vancouver, Victoria, Campbell River, Kamloops and the Fernie/Cranbrook area.

The construction of our first two luxury parks has been completed for the 1969 summer season. A 270-unit combination travel trailer and mobile home court in the City of Penticton, B.C., and a deluxe 80-unit travel trailer park in Parksville, B.C. Within the next five years a trailerite will be able to travel throughout B.C. utilizing Caravan's reservation system ensuring a space with parks situated no more than 200 miles apart.

Our parks consist of swimming pool, restrooms, showers, laundry and concession facilities. Each site has undeground connections for water, electricity and sewage services. All courts will be situated for prime recreational use such as fishing, hunting, swimming, etc.

Foreign Trade Loss In Britain Big Disappointment

LONDON (AP) — Britain's foreign trade deficit—the loss on its foreign trade books—jumped by £12,000,000 ($31,200,000) in July to £37,000,000 ($96,200,000), the government board of trade announced today.

The figures were disappointing. A smaller deficit had been expected by financial circles here.

Foreign exchange dealers had predicted that a deficit of more than £3,000,000 would increase selling pressure on the pound sterling, already near its official floor in the backwash of speculation from devaluation of the French franc.

The pound stood at $2.3837 just before the announced trade figures. Foreign exchange dealers were studying the impact and refusing to quote sterling prices for the first half hour afterwards.

Trade figures are an especially important influence on the British pound because this island nation lives on foreign trade. When it buys more abroad than it sells to foreign customers, as it did last month, the pound weakens.

The board of trade figures this time, however, were blurred by an additional factor and it was unclear immediately what effect this would have on the pound.

Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, announced June 21 that Britain had been underestimating its exports and that the deficit therefore was less than the published figures.

July was the first month that this new calculation was made. The board of trade said if this was taken into account the visible trade deficit in July was really only £27,000,000.

It was not clear immediately which deficit figure, £37,000,000 or £27,000,000, would be used by foreign exchange dealers in their calculations of the effect on the pound.

Montreal Bomb Suspects Released

MONTREAL (CP) — Three young men arrested in connection with Tuesday morning's bombing of a downtown federal revenue building were released later in the day.

"We have nothing against the suspects," a police spokesman said after their release. They were aged 18, 20 and 22.

Police made two arrests moments after the blast—which they described as "the most powerful" in the last year—shattered glass doors and windows in the 14-storey building on Bleury St. and Dorchester Boulevard.

The third suspect was arrested a short time after the initial arrests.

The only apparent injury was to Sgt. Jacques Auger, who may have suffered ear damage when the explosion occurred shortly before 3 a.m.

Sgt. Auger was near the building at the time and made the arrests. Night watchmen inside the building were not injured.

It was the second bombing in the Montreal area in three days and the 21st in 1969. And it was the second bombing of the building since last New Year's.

At the entrance, the explosion bored a hole two feet deep and more than one foot wide. Upper floor offices were a shambles.

A smaller bomb on New Year's Eve damaged two garage doors and three parked cars.

In Montreal's other bombing incident, on Saturday, an explosion rocked a branch of Industrial Acceptance Co. in suburban Town of Mount Royal.

German Cabinet Meeting

BONN (Reuters) — The coalition cabinet of Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger, already split over whether to revalue the mark, meets today to consider policy in light of the devaluation of the French franc Friday.

Among other things, the cabinet is expected to discuss the effect of the French devaluation on the agriculture policy of the European Common Market, including the decision of the finance and agriculture ministers of the six members Monday to isolate France's farm market from that of its community partners.

Economic Minister Karl Schiller, a Social Democrat who has called for revaluation of the mark, made plain during the weekend that Bonn is determined to ensure that West German farmers do not suffer from the Paris decision.

The cabinet session will be followed by a meeting of the so-called Kressbrown Circle, an informal policy-making group which links leaders of Kiesinger's Christian Democratic party and their Social Democratic partners in the ruling coalition.

Kiesinger and his party have rejected proposals for a change in the mark's parity, made repeatedly by Schiller and the Social Democrats.

The dispute, a major issue in the campaign for the federal elections next month, reached a new height Tuesday when the Social Democrat party presidium issued a statement implying that an upward revaluation still is necessary.

Blackmarket Sales Of Aussie Wheat Only Way Left

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
Canadian Press Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP) — Black market dealings in wheat are threatening Australia's ailing grain industry.

The black market has started because there is chronic overproduction of wheat. Under a government-backed price stabilization scheme, wheat cannot legally be sold for less than $1.70 a bushel. But farmers with an embarrassing surplus are selling their wheat for as little as 60 cents a bushel.

And they are glad to get even that. Within a few months a quota system will begin operating and only a percentage of farmers' wheat will be accepted by the government wheat board for storage. The left-over wheat will have to be stored by the farmer on his own property or in any way he can find.

With another bumper crop expected, there could be a surplus of nearly 200,000,000 bushels of wheat in Australia when the harvest is collected next January.

Peter Meehan, vice-president of the Australian Wheatgrowers' Federation, said: "The black market will ruin us if it isn't stopped. This is the worst thing that has happened in 20 years and if it is allowed to continue it will destroy the wheat marketing scheme."

But the poor farmers are desperate not to be left with stocks of wheat for which they cannot find storage.

John Wilton, a politician in a wheat-growing area, said: "I don't really blame the farmers for selling it cheap. Some of them are small growers who have nowhere to store their non-quota wheat."

The wheat is being bought by the big city flour and stock millers who know many of the smaller farmers have no alternative but to sell at any price they can get.

The political difficulties over the wheat crisis are worsening. Trade Minister Jack McEwen returned from International Grains Arrangement talks in Washington claiming he had won a victory for Australian wheat growers by keeping the agreement alive.

But a Country party member of Parliament, Don Maisey, accused McEwen, who is federal leader of the Country party, of "selling out" the wheat farmers.

There is considerable concern among Country party politicians that they could lose seats in the federal elections due before the end of the year.

In one wheat-growing area in New South Wales in June, the Country party vote fell nearly 10 per cent in a byelection because, it is believed, of discontent with government policies on wheat. The Country party is part of the coalition government with the Liberal party.

Immediately on his return from Washington, McEwen had long talks with Prime Minister John Gorton on the wheat crisis.

Some Country party interests are pressing the prime minister to hold an early election.

Cell Exchange Only Gain For Hijacker

By FENTON WHEELER

HAVANA (AP) — Lester Perry, who escaped from two U.S. marshals by hijacking an airliner to Cuba recently, has probably changed his prison cell in the United States for one in Cuba.

There has been no announcement of the whereabouts of the hulking 32-year-old convict who diverted a TWA jetliner to Havana July 31. But if the usual pattern is being followed, he is still in a security cell in Havana undergoing questioning.

Perry, under sentence of more than 25 years for two robberies, was being taken to Los Angeles for another robbery trial when he held a razor blade to a stewardess' throat and ordered the plane to turn around.

The Cubans are expected to give him his choice between remaining in jail or accepting some government rehabilitation program including hard agricultural labor.

TREATMENT ROUGHER

The Cuban government has yet to force the return of any hijacker—criminal or political—to the United States against his will. But "it's obvious the Cubans don't want undesirable criminal elements running around their country," said a non-Communist diplomat.

The government has never announced final disposition of any hijackers' cases. But recent treatment is reported as not as good as before. The bulk of those finally determined to be legitimate political refugees are allowed to integrate into Cuban society. This usually means plenty of hard work; some Negro hijackers have complained about being sent to the sugar cane fields under the hot sun.

Privileges for hijackers now appear few, if any. Thomas George Washington of Philadelphia, who came to Cuba to get his child away from his former wife, is living off a regular Cuban ration book.

Before Perry's exploit, the last time a hijacker with a criminal record came to Cuba from the United States, the Communist party newspaper announced he had been put under arrest. It was the first such announcement. He was identified as Anthony G. Bryant, and the newspaper said he had trafficked in narcotics and had been in trouble for robbery in the United States. There has been no information on him since.

He hijacked a National Airlines jet last March and robbed the passengers of $1,700 while en route to Cuba. The Cuban authorities made him return the mony.

GIVEN SAFE CONDUCT

Swiss authorities, who represent U.S. interests in Cuba, say the Cuban government has not objected to requests of hijackers who want to be returned to the United States. They are given Swiss safe conduct visas via Mexico to the United States where they face prosecution on hijacking charges.

Cuban officials have indicated they are not overjoyed by the rash of hijackings but they remain uncommitted to returning hijackers.

The pattern at this point is if a hijacker has committed no crime in Cuba, he is free to leave if he can arrange transportation out. For those who left the United States for political reasons, this usually means going to a Communist or socialist country.

For hijackers wanted for crimes in the United States, even most of those doors are closed.

It's Probable Perfect Murders Carried Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Coroner Glen McDonald says it is "not only possible but probable" that perfect murders are being committed in Vancouver.

"Just thinking about them scares the hell out of me," he said in an interview.

He said the method is unfortunately simple.

All a person has to do to murder a drug addict is quietly slip him a "hot cap"—a capsule of pure heoin or a fatal mixture of morphine and barbituates—and the death is recorded as an overdose, a suicide or an accidental poisoning.

Mr. McDonald said 94 deaths in Vancouver last year were attributed to an overdose of addictive drugs and all but 22 of these have been classified as accidental.

"But how can I be sure?" he asked. "Even with expert toxological examinations, we still have trouble classifying the dead."

He said that in order to lay a murder charge the investigating officer must prove "that the addict was given the hot cap by a person who intended murder."

"This is almost impossible to establish."

NDP Veteran Runs Hard —This Time

By JIM HUME, Times Reporter

PORT ALBERNI—In 1966 Johnny Squire was the veteran NDP member of the B.C. legislature, representing the Alberni constituency.

A confident man running for re-election in a traditional socialist stronghold, he lightly viewed an upstart young medical doctor from the west coast nominated to carry the Social Credit colors in that three-year-old fray.

If he thought about the Liberals it wasn't for more than a few seconds during breakfast.

The Liberals, Johnny Squire knew, would give him no trouble. And, the young medic from Tofino couldn't be held a real threat in NDP country.

Squire was right about the Liberals. They pulled little more than 500 votes out of the 10,871 ballots cast.

He was wrong about Howard McDiarmid, MD.

As a result of that error, Squire woke up the morning after on the wrong end of the final vote count, trailing his Social Credit rookie rival by 1,718 votes.

There wasn't much Squire could do about that.

Three years ago Squire reveiwed his position then started work to rectify the situation.

It's well known here in the smoke-shrouded Alberni Valley that gravel-voiced Squire started his present re-election campaign 18 months ago. And, that for the past eight months he's been running hard.

SQUIRE
. . . pounding sidewalks

So hard that, following the Tom Barnett-Richard Durante federal contest last Easter, he aggressively picked up the election machinery bequeathed him by Barnett and movd it into provincial gear.

This time around Stanley John Squire is leaving nothing to chance.

He isn't even underestimating the Liberals, although Grit party faithful admit there isn't much chance of their 25-year-old candidate Gene Romaniuk coming even close to Squire or McDiarmid.

Romaniuk himself is too proud to admit that he doesn't stand a chance as the little man caught between west coast giants.

"But we can't do any worse than last time," he says.

"And I think we can do a lot better."

McDiarmid's campaign manager Jack Walters will concede that to Romaniuk.

Still Basking in Glory of 1966 Win

"He's working hard and I would guess that he'll triple the 1966 total," he says, "but I think he'll get those extra votes from the NDP."

That could be a campaign manager whistling in the dark.

Walters, who makes his home in Victoria, ran McDiarmid's 1966 successful campaign.

Interviewed Monday afternoon in his motel room campaign headquarters, he's still basking in the glory of that win.

And that could prove as fatal for him and for his country-stumping candidate McDiarmid as complacency did for Squire three years ago.

Squire is going for the hard work door-knocking route to the legislature.

McDiarmid, well aware that he received little support from the up-country areas last time, is concentrarting on the rural outposts with charter flights, gobbling up the greater portion of his campaign budget.

McDIARMID
. . . laying out fish

Squire isn't neglecting the remote areas, but he's putting his big pitch into the Alberni Valley proper where, in 1966, his apple-cart upset.

While McDiarmid hopes for success from a salmon barbecue, scheduled to be blessed with the presence of Premier Bennett on Aug. 2, Squire is pounding the sidewalks and talking.

The Socred barbecue—they'r catering for 1,000 people with half-a-ton of fresh salmon—brings a chuckle from the community.

It's well known that Liberal leader Pat McGeer will be in the Albernis on Aug. 21—for a salmon barbecue. And the liberals, too, are catering for 1,000 in an attempt to upstage their rivals.

Lot of Money Poured into Socred Drive

NDP workers ireverenty point out that while the loaves and fishes swayed the masses 2,000 years ago the man that worked that miracle doesn't hold a card in either party.

All parties in this affluent section of the Island talk about their campaign budgets with reticence. McDiarmid's campaign boss Walters revised his figures three times in five minutes Monday.

His first attempt to guess what the election would cost Social Credit was "around $3,000." It was quickly updated a couple of minutes later after he boasted of "1,200 large sgns being ready by Wednesday."

At a minimum price of $2 a sign (they usually run from $3 to $4) Walters apparently realized reporters can multiply.

"Our last campaign cost $8,500," he said. "Maybe that would be closer. About the same as last time, $8,000 plus—but, course, that doesn't include transportation costs."

Outsiders figure, and Walters does not disagree, that by the time McDiarmid has totted up his flying time the Socred campaign will have cost well in excess of $10,000 and could even by pushing the $20,000 mark.

Alberni Liberals aren't having that trouble.

Romaniuk admits with chagrin that he doesn't have much cash to work with.

"Our total budget is $2,000," he says. "But we have a lot of volunteer workers (he estimates around 200) and we're making our own signs."

A paint-strewn workshop at the rear of his election headquarters and the amateur art work on the signs attest to the truth of his statements.

Asked how he proposed getting to the remoter corners of the constituency without cash for charter aircraft (the voting area runs from Clo-oose in the south to Kyuquot in the north) Romaniuk said ruefully he didn't know.

"I called about a charter flight today, but they told me it would cost $240 for four hours," he said. "We can't afford that. But I'll get into these places. I don't know how, but I'll make it."

He's a sincere young man, as yet unbruised by the realities of political campaigning.

Squire's budget has been set at "around $5,000" with the bulk of that going on transportation.

"Our big saving on this campaign has come because we are delivering by hand every piece of literature," Squire said this morning.

"It's a tremendous job, but we decided early that a face-to-face confrontation with the electors would be better than a cold mail drop."

Squire, a little weary after a 4 a.m. arrival in Port Alberni from a West Coast road trip, was on deck at headquarters shortly after 9:30 a.m.

He's confident, but not cocky. And he had a raspy criticism of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who complained Monday that the NDP were running their campaign with the aid of out-of-province workers.

Squire has two Winnipeg-based organizers on his election staff.

"We'll run the kind of campaign we feel best suited to the people and the party," he said.

"As for Peterson, he best of all should know about high-priced help fronting for the Social Credit party. Our help isn't high-priced. They are party workers prepared to work in any part of Canada for their belief."

It was the harshest thing Johnny Squire had to say about any of his opponents. He's mellowed in the last three years. But he's running hard and the betting in the Valley is that he'll make it back to Victoria.

NEW SATELLITE TUMBLING

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With its chances of survival rated "a real cliffhanger" for the next two weeks, a $12,000,000 experimental satellite tumbled around earth today while engineers planned ways to bring it under control.

Launched Tuesday, the 1,980-pound craft—called ATX V for fifth applications technology satellite—ended up in the right orbit but on the wrong side of earth and began spinning end-over-end.

Despite the problems, Robert J. Darcey, chief of the ATS office at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Centre, rated chances as "pretty damn good" that the spacecraft can be straightened out and shifted to its desired station over the Pacific 600 miles west of South America.

An attempt to regain control probably will not take place for two weeks, however, and another official predicted "it'll be a real cliffhanger" until then.

Packed with apparatus for 13 experiments, the satellite was designed to test ideas for spacecraft of the future.

If successful, one of three communications experiments aboard the payload could pave the way for satellites to relay high-frequency radio signals between air traffic controllers and transocean jets and pinpoint the aircraft's location over areas out of range of ground-based radars.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1969 —PAGE 15

'OLD COMMIE TACTICS'

Signs—and Candidates—Hacked Down

Election signs are being hacked down in Saanich and the Islands riding while Social Credit and New Democratic Party candidates verbally hatchet each other.

Socred candidate John Tisdalle said today axe-wielding sign smashers are trying to stamp out freedom of speech.

★ ★ ★

He was angered by the destruction of several of his signs on Pender and Galiano Islands and throughout Central Saanich.

"They're using the old Commie tactics," said Tisdalle.

He said the same tactics had been used by youths carrying NDP signs in Vancouver in a confrontation Friday with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"It's a planned crusade by some idiots against freedom of speech."

Tisdalle said as he left Galiano Island Tuesday he saw his signs slashed to pieces "as if someone was trying to wreak vengeance on the free enterprise system."

NDP candidate Don Johannessen, replying to Tisdalle's charges, said the Socred was "running real scared."

★ ★ ★

"We've had signs destroyed and stolen," he said.

"But I've told everyone working on my campaign — under no conditions do you touch the signs of any other political candidates."

Johannsessen said he believed the sign smashers were probably adherents of none of the political parties.

"Tisdalle has no campaign issues so he's using name-calling.

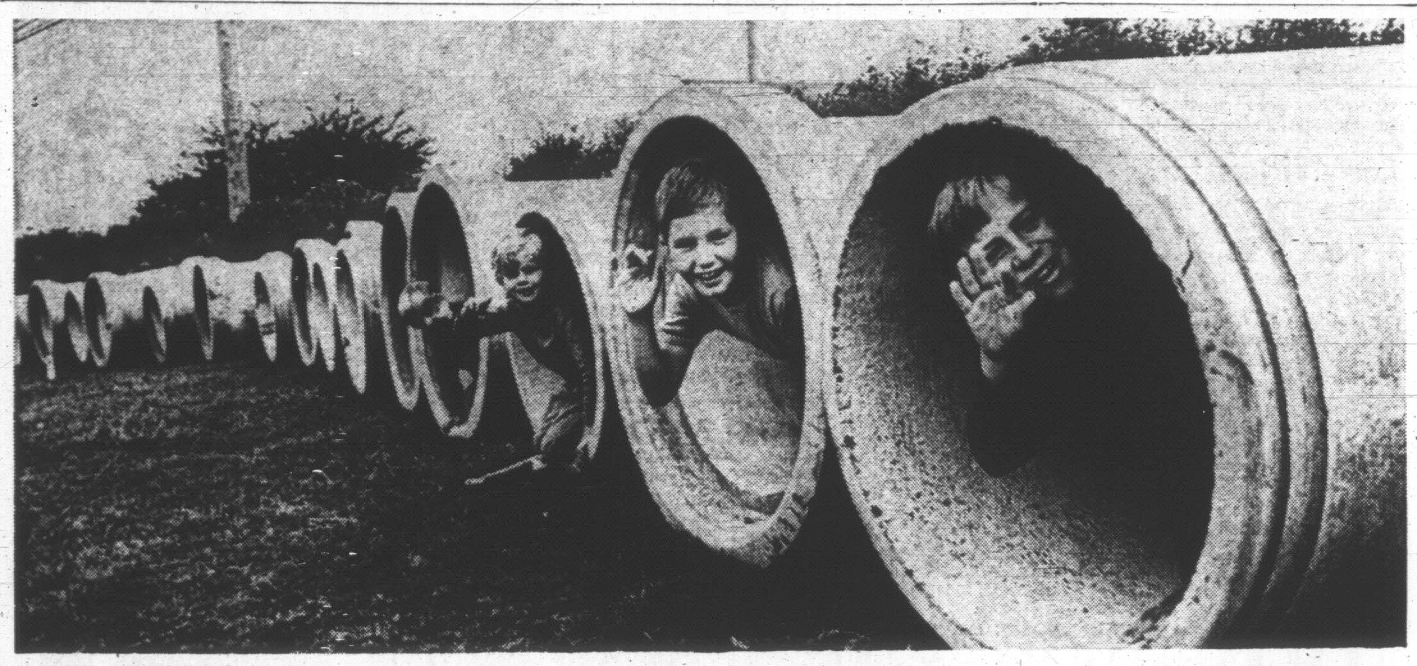
"This shows his complete disregard for the working man," said Johannessen. "He's endangering the lives of workmen."

The Liberals have not found themselves involved in the sign warfare but then they only have about a dozen election signs up.

★ ★ ★

"We're just getting our campaign rolling," said Paddy Palmer, campaign manager for Louis Lindholm.

"We'll be doing a little of everything during this campaign, except knocking down other candidates' signs."



GIANT SEWER PIPES make great echo chambers and private forts, but the pipe will be buried soon as work starts on a $200,000 sewer line being installed by Saanich and the province. The line will run from the Tillicum area to service a vocational school and Glendale Hospital, both under construction in the Wilkinson Road Jail area. Eventually the line will serve as a main trunk to service the whole, unsewered area around the jail. (Bill Halkett photo.)

NDP and Grits Out Swinging, But Bennett?

The Liberals and New Democrats are moving their heavy artillery into Greater Victoria but the Social Credit big gun remains silent here thus far.

Premier Bennett traditionally saves Victoria for the latter part of his election campaigns, but the five local Socred candidates don't know if he'll be coming here this year or not.

No plans have been made for the traditional Victoria rally for the five area candidates.

Reginald Pring, campaign manager for Victoria cabinet ministers W. N. Chant and Waldo Skillings, said Tuesday he has heard nothing about a rally.

"I know Mr. Bennett likes a rally in Victoria," he said. "But I haven't heard of one being planned for this year."

NDP leader Tom Berger and Liberal leader Pat McGeer are making a determined effort to woo voters here where four of the five MLAs in the last legislature were Socreds.

Berger wound up his second visit to the area Tuesday.

McGeer arrives Monday and a Liberal corn roast is planned for Tuesday at Elk Lake for area supporters.

McGeer then goes up island to campaign and tentatively will spend another day later in the week campaigning in this area.

Prominent NDP MLA in the last legislature, Dave Barrett arrives Friday to campaign with Saanich and the Islands candidate Don Johannesson.

Douglas to Aid Campaign

Johanessen will enlist the aid of national NDP leader T. C. Douglas Saturday on Salt Spring Island.

Sunday all local NDP candidates will appear with Douglas at a picnic at the Sea Bluff farm of Jeff Mitchell in Metchosin.

The appearance of the big names is only a small part of the local campaign however.

Householders will be deluged with literature and canvassers. Candidates will drink a lot of coffee as the campaign enters its last two weeks today.

Victoria NDP candidates Peter Bunn and Phil Fawcett have abandoned the coffee-party technique in favor of door-to-door canvassing in Victoria riding.

"Everybody's tried coffee but it's canvassing that wins elections," said Bunn.

Librals Mel Couvelier and Ian Stewart believe the coffee parties are an important forum for candidates.

"There are 41,000 people in this riding and it's just impossible to shake that many hands," explained campaign manager David Wilson.

Cabinet ministers Chant and Skillings will hold a party for their workers tonight at Socred headquarters.

They, along with NDP and Liberal candidates attended a noon all-candidates meeting today at the Student's Union Building, University of Victoria.

Two all-candidates meetings are scheduled for Victoria riding Aug. 20.

In the afternoon the Silver Threads are sponsoring a meeting at the Centennial Square building and at 8:30 p.m. the Jaycees will present the candidates at Central Junior High School.

In Cowichan-Malahat the Liberals have finally entered the race with the nomination Tuesday of James Bigsby, 26, a Victorian and personal assistant to McGeer.

Nomination Deadline Passed

Nominations for candidates running in the Aug. 27 provincial election closed at 1 p.m. today.

Returning officers for southern Vancouver Island ridings were at municipal halls in Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, Duncan and the Victoria Court House to officially announce the close of nominations and announce candidates names.

●

By noon, candidates were:

Victoria — W. N. Chant (SC); Waldo Skillings (SC); Peter Bunn (NDP); Phil Fawcett (NDP); Ian Stewart (L); Mel Couvelier (L); Bill Scott (Ind).

Saanich and the Island — John Tisdalle (SC); Don Johannessen (NDP); Louis Lindholm (L).

Esquimalt—Herbert Brunch (SC); James Gorst (NDP); Fred Phillips (L).

Cowichan-Malahat — Dr. Charles Ennals (SC); Robert Strachan (NDP); James Bigsby (L); Kenneth Hasanen (Ind).

Gang of Six Juveniles Pursued In City-Wide Rash of Break-Ins

By HUMPHRY DAVY

More than 120 break-ins and thefts have been committed by juveniles in the Greater Victoria area since the summer holidays began.

Police youth squads believe the number of house-breaking offences committed by pre-teenage groups to be the highest on record.

Every district in the Greater Victoria area is affected, but the greater number of offences are in Oak Bay where 50 break-ins took place in July alone.

The juveniles between 10 and 13 and operating in gangs or in pairs, broke into homes, and stole mostly cash, watches, jewellery and transistor radios.

In one home $250 in cash was stolen.

CHEQUES TAKEN

Family allowance cheques were also taken and in some cases actually cashed at banks.

Chief John Green of Oak Bay said break-ins committed by juveniles jumped from six in June to 50 in July.

"As far as I know there hasn't been a year like this," he said "Our officers have worked on cases around the clock."

He said the majority of house break-ins were committed by a group of six.

"The moved into every district," he said. Two went to the mainland and also committed numerous thefts in Vancouver, North Vancouver and Burnaby.

The chief made it clear that he did not think the number of delinquents is increasing.

"The offences have," he said, "but these have mainly been committed by a group of children who have problems — problems which we haven't yet been able to solve."

Saanich police reported 42 offences, many committed by the same group operating in Oak Bay.

Detective-Sergeant Robin Stewart said members of the youth squad have been under strain since the start of the summer holidays.

"From a taxpayer's point of view it has been a costly summer," he said. "Investigations are costly. It takes time to wind up these cases."

The city reported 30 breaking and entering incidents in July. There were also three thefts over $50.

DOORS UNLOCKED

Esquimalt police said they have had about 12 break-ins.

Police said in many cases the juveniles entered the homes while their owners were working in their back gardens. They left the front door unlocked.

But quite a number of homes were broken into when their owners were away, they said.

Chief Green said many homeowners never realized their homes had been broken into until the delinquents had been caught.

"They thought they had lost the money or mislaid it," he said.

He said the young offenders often did not know what to do with the loot and threw away such things as watches and jewelery.

He said the force spent considerable time tracing down the owners of stolen articles.

Police said parents could do much to stop juvenile thefts if they questioned their children on all new articles they might bring home.

"Front doors should also be locked," said one officer.

Fire Bans Lifted And Eased

The ban on outside burning was lifted in Victoria this morning and partially relaxed in Saanich.

It now is possible to use incinerators at any time in the city but only between 8 a.m. and noon in Saanich.

Deputy fire chief Glen Robbins said Saanich is only partially lifting its ban because the municipality has vast areas of bush which the city doesn't have.

Permits for outside burning are needed during summer months.

Restrictions were imposed because of dry conditions, but this was followed by some rain Monday and Tuesday.

Victoria weathermen are predicting no more showers for a few days, and temperatures are expected to be slightly warmer.

Humidity, which was high Tuesday, is dropping today, but this should reduce the fire hazard, officials said.

Forecast high for today is 55, and for Thursday, 67.

To the Tune of Archaic Woodwinds Berger Calls Bennett All Huff

By SUSAN MAYSE

Hippies, leather-jacketed motorcyclists and University of Victoria students mingled with New Democratic Party campaigners to hear party leader Tom Berger in Centennial Square Tuesday night.

As the cast of The Merchant of Venice performed intricate medieval dances to the sound of archaic woodwinds on the other side of the fountain, a crowd of 150 gathered to hear Berger's short address.

Premier Bennett is waging a campaign of insults, not policies, he told them.

'NEGATIVE PROGRAM'

"It's very interesting the way the premier never talks about his campaign," he said.

"He's running a negative program — his campaign is just 'keep those guys (NDP) out so we can stay in' — he's always talking about the NDP instead.

"I've been all over the province, and everywhere people are asking questions about the issues," Berger said.

NO FAVORS

"Pollution, education, industrial development — they're as concerned as we are about fundamental things. No one's listening to idle chatter about socialism, except perhaps Mr. Chant and Waldo Skillings," he said.

British Columbia's major industries of tourism, fishing, farming and ranching are being crippled by pollution, he warned.

"This government had killed off thousands of jobs all over the province because it refuses to enforce the laws on pollution."

And NDP government in B.C. would have "no favors for friends, no favors for Commonwealth Trust, no favors for people who pollute our water sources," he told the crowd.

Berger urged NDP supporters to publicize the party. "Make sure you tell your friends and neighbors about our program — don't let Bennett tell them — he's an unreliable source," he said.

"I think you can sense a mood of change in the people of this province. People are looking for a new leader, a new direction.

"We're the party that can provide it."

Two men, dressed in buckskins and high boots, bearded and earringed, approached the party leader for his opinion on gun legislation, and compulsory motorcycle helmets.

"I would hate to see indiscriminate use of guns as in the United States — I think it's the mark of a sick society," Berger responded. "I'm all in favor of legislation preventing people from having guns."

However, motorcycle enthusiasts Daniel O'Brien, 28, and Laird Haggart, 22, said they weren't satisfied with the NDP leader's response to their questions.

"He didn't answer my questions at all," said O'Brien, a past student leader at Uvic.

Esquimalt Buildup Indicated Again

A senior Canadian armed forces officer today strengthened indications that Greater Victoria bases will not suffer by defence department cutbacks.

In fact, Col. Robert S. Turnbull, the Pacific maritime command's chief of staff for logistics, said he felt that possible shutdown of bases in other parts of Canada could result in the reinforcing of army and navy bases in Esquimalt.

Assistant deputy minister of national defence Tom Morry told the National Defence Employees' Association convention at Halifax Tuesday that he estimated 3,000 defence employees may be laid off in the department's consolidation program.

Turnbull feels there will be no layoffs here.

"As far as I am aware there is no suggestion of any phasing out here." With the work that HMC Dockyard has, including the major conversions of HMCS Gatineau and HMCS Rainbow, "it seems to me that we stand to benefit from the base consolidation program."

★ ★ ★

He confirmed that possible closure of bases in Alberta could result in the expansion of Esquimalt army and navy bases.

"There is a big study going on at the present time and the minister (Defence Minister Leo Cadieux) said recently that an announcement would be made at the end of August.

"To date there has been no departmental announcement but we are expecting one any day."

Turnbull said that a program of consolidation had been carried out by the Canadian Armed Forces Base, Esquimalt.

"The consolidation we have done has involved the reshuffling of bodies but no phasing out.

"As you know the dockyard and the base now both come under one identity. The aim is for greater efficiency."

Gatineau Arrives Thursday

The destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau will arrive in Esquimalt Thursday at 2:30 p.m.

Commanded by Cmdr. W. A. Hughes, she will undergo a major conversion at HMC Dockyard and is one of four Restigouche class ships due for modernization.

On Thursday, the Gatineau will have completed a course which saw her leave Halifax earlier this year, steaming through the Panama Canal en route to Victoria.

The $3.3 million conversion will take 15 months.

NON-FISHERMEN MAY scoff at the phenomenon of the lucky outfit, but I've met few properly salted salmon chasers who haven't encountered it. Like extra-sensory perception, the fortune that favors one assemblage of trolling tackle has never been adequately explained.

Possibly faith or the lack of it has a bearing on the matter, and by that theory I choose to abide.

My wife owns just such a rod. I made it for her in the pre-fiberglass era from a length of Calcutta cane, at an outlay that left change from a five dollar bill.

★

It has become thoroughly disreputable. Its ferrule jams, its cork-strip butt wrapping is chipped, and it gives off a protesting creak when under strain.

I would gladly trade a fine, store-new replacement for it, and throw in my pet reel as a goodwill gesture.

No dice. Owners of lucky outfits aren't open to offers. Neither would I be if that rod were mine.

★

It went north with us last weekend to the top of the Gulf, and a fishing prospect that was not of the best.

There were tyee in the famed Tyee Pool off Campbell River mouth where the great spawners linger before their death-journey upstream.

Enough lesser chinooks had been caught to keep hope alive. But coho were scarce, even though a run was reported to have put in down near Nanaimo, and another over in the Sechelt area. Perhaps the fishing would pick up in September, our host suggested with professional optimism.

Another resort owner—his cottages and trailer camp well-filled, but most of his outboard boats idle—was more forthright.

"They tell me it's the worst coho season in 50 years," he said. "It has me worried."

However, it's the line in the water that stands the chance. Late that afternoon, we shoved off from Campbell River with good friends who had trailered a 23-footer up from California. They were also wondering what had happened to the coho.

★

The previous day, they'd run out to Mittlenatch Island on the strength of a report that its tricky surrounding waters had yielded some good catches. They caught no coho, but took a bouncing when a breeze from the mainland clashed with the tide-rip, and were glad, this next time out, to give the inshore reaches a try.

With a rod out on either side and a deeper rig fishing the slot between, we eased south through prime salmon water. Inland, the summit of Mt. Albert Edward showed plain in a widening belt of clear sky.

★

It was a calm, mild evening, fish or no fish, and I suppose we were ungrateful to feel that a burst of harsh chatter from one of those silent reels was needed to complete it.

The tide was running briskly, and slow though our passage was, the rod-tips nodded out too fast a beat for my liking.

Win's especially. I told her so.

The words were no sooner spoken than her lucky outfit issued a contradiction. It bent, it creaked, and the reel secured to its handle with a pair of hose clamps made fisherman's music.

This was no coho, but we were not of a mind to turn up our noses at a plump jackspring. The dwarf chinook did look a mite lonely in the fish-box, but it was the only salmon to come our way, and with tartare sauce to set it off, it would make a toothsome meal.

★

Even Win's lucky outfit failed to stir a fin next day. Still, September may be better, and if it isn't, we can always remember the 18-pound coho that put the creak in a rod with really should be retired.

Not that it will be. While it remains functional, its owner will cherish it.

And, it goes without saying, keep right on outscoring me!

I don't know if this will really turn you on, or not, but the title that has turned up along with the song is:

"Look out World."

Jeux Canada Games 1969.

Yes, this is Canada's own private version of the Olympics and yet another space station along the ever-expanding athletic highway of Canada's sports world.

The idea had a beginning, as an idea, in 1924 with amateur organizations urging a national sports competition for Canadians and covering most of the Olympic events.

That was 45 years ago and now that beginning has its first summer climax beginning Aug. 16, when 3,000 athletes will compete in 15 events for the glory of all of Canada in the Halifax and Dartmouth areas.

Prime Minister Trudeau will officiate at the opening on Saturday and Governor-General Roland Michener at the closing on Aug. 24.

The express purpose of the games, says general manager Keith Lewis, is simply the promotion and development of amateur sports throughout Canada with emphasis on "throughout."

●

In this regard, Deputy Provincial Secretary Lawrie Wallace will represent the province at the opening with an eye to the possibility of staging the games here in the future.

"We will certainly do what we can to have it here," he said. "And I intend to look into every aspect of it when I am in Halifax."

Perhaps the prime effect of the Canada Games is to raise the level of physical fitness of Canadian youth and to produce thousands of new athletes by stint of more competition at local and provincial levels leading to national competition. Because, for the first time, athletes from every section of the country will be able to compete on a national scale with other amateurs from other areas, not only in individual sports but particularly in team events.

In addition, Canadian cities which hitherto have had relatively few athletic facilities will get an opportunity to have such facilities provided through assistance by the federal government as Ottawa will pay the full operating cost of the games plus one-third of the capital cost.

●

This year, for example, Halifax and Dartmouth have had built a 2,500-seat grandstand and field house at Beazley Field, Dartmouth; a 10,000-seat stadium at St. Mary's University, Halifax; an eight-lane, all-weather track at Beazley Field; six all-weather tennis courts, four bowling greens and have converted Lake Bonook, Dartmouth, into a 1,200-metre rowing course by completely removing an island and dredging the lake bed.

This works out to a total games cost of $1,175,000 with the federal government picking up the tab for $1,138,000. The Province of Nova Scotia has contributed $300,000, the city of Halifax $212,896, the city of Dartmouth $87,104.

Actually the Canada Winter Games which were held in Quebec City in 1967 were the forerunner to the summer games, the plan being to alternate the summer and winter games every two years, and to select a middle-sized city as the site in each case.

B.C. put in a bid for the 1971 Winter Games but lost out to Saskatoon, thus Wallace feels that perhaps we have a better than average chance of getting the next summer games, four years hence.

The view to world class competition is that the games will fit into a sports calendar that now includes the Commonwealth Games in 1970, the Pan American Games in '71, and the Olympics in '72, or a major event of national or international significance every year.

Certainly it will take time for the explosion to reach international proportions, but at least a start has been made, and it's nice to think that the province is ready and willing to play its part if given the opportunity.

Pitching Plays Key Role; Winners to Clash Tonight

By STEVE HUME

Outstanding pitching played a major role at Hampton Park, Tuesday, as Edmonton Hardisty and Vancouver Collingwood advanced to the winners' bracket of the Canadian Little League baseball championships.

Edmonton, playing under heavy overcast and a light drizzle on slippery grass, came through with unexpected power at the plate and a coolly professional job by hurler Tom Betts as they stopped Valleyfield, Quebec, 3-2, in the tourney opener.

In the evening game Collingwood pitcher Doug Cochrane's dazzling performance fired his team to a precise 2-0 win over Galt Nationals of Ontario with an excellent exhibition of baseball.

Cochrane, an 11-year-old, looked all baseball player as he struck out 13 batters on the way to his shutout. It was his seventh straight playoff victory.

With an unusually smooth delivery for a Little Leaguer, Cochrane mixed up his pitches to perfection, and used a deceptive fast ball to mow down some formidable batting talent.

Betts Survives Early Jitters

Betts, pitching the earlier game with an injured glove hand, was hampered by a team with first-inning jitters, but refused to succumb. He struck out 12.

He calmly overcame what looked like serious trouble in the top of the first, and later methodically snuffed out a pair of abortive Quebec uprisings that threatened his team's 3-1 second-inning lead.

Betts' second pitch was tagged for a bunt and he threw wildly to first, leaving a runner safe; when runners later advanced to second and third after a wild pitch got away from catcher Hugh Coflin, things looked black indeed.

CONTROL PROBLEMS

But the lanky 12-year-old remained cool, and with an almost casual expression on his face, put the inning on ice.

Hardisty runs in the bottom of the first came when Quebec pitcher Pierre Rochefort developed some control problems with his wicked, side-arm delivery.

Coflin picked off a fastball to crack a hard grounder that went past second baseman Daniel Maheu, and when left fielder Tom Gruninger was hit on the head the bases were loaded.

Centre fielder Jeff Milne then singled to drive in two runs.

After that, Rochefort was in control.

Quebec, with two out and the bases loaded in the top of the second, scored the first of their two runs when catcher John Stewart stroked a line single just over the first baseman's head to send one man home.

An alert Edmonton defence picked off another runner at the plate to close out the inning.

WINNING RUN

In the bottom of the second Hardisty picked up the winning run when Rochefort walked Tom Bateman. Second baseman Stu Brookwell singled, Duncan Knoll beat out a bunt to load the bases, and Coflin smacked a hard grounder down the first-base line to score Bateman.

After a scoreless third inning Quebec made a strong bid to get back in the running, and Edmonton seemed determined to help them out.

The final Quebec run came off three consecutive errors by Edmonton infielders.

With two out, first baseman Daniel Lamadeleine tagged a Betts pitch, then errors at first and third sent Daniel Beland sprinting home.

ERROR HURTS

In the evening game Vancouver opened the scoring in the bottom of the first when a right-field error on Bill Gamble's single allowed Harold Nassey to score from second.

Gamble drove in both runs for Collingwood.

Cochrane kept the bigger Galt batters off balance throughout the game.

But he didn't do it all by himself. The Ontario squad picked up six hits, and it was errorless and precise play by infielders that kept them off the scoreboard.

Vancouver scored again in the bottom of the third to put the icing on the cake, but the Galt team, with big players capable of the long ball were never out of contention.

CONFIDENT

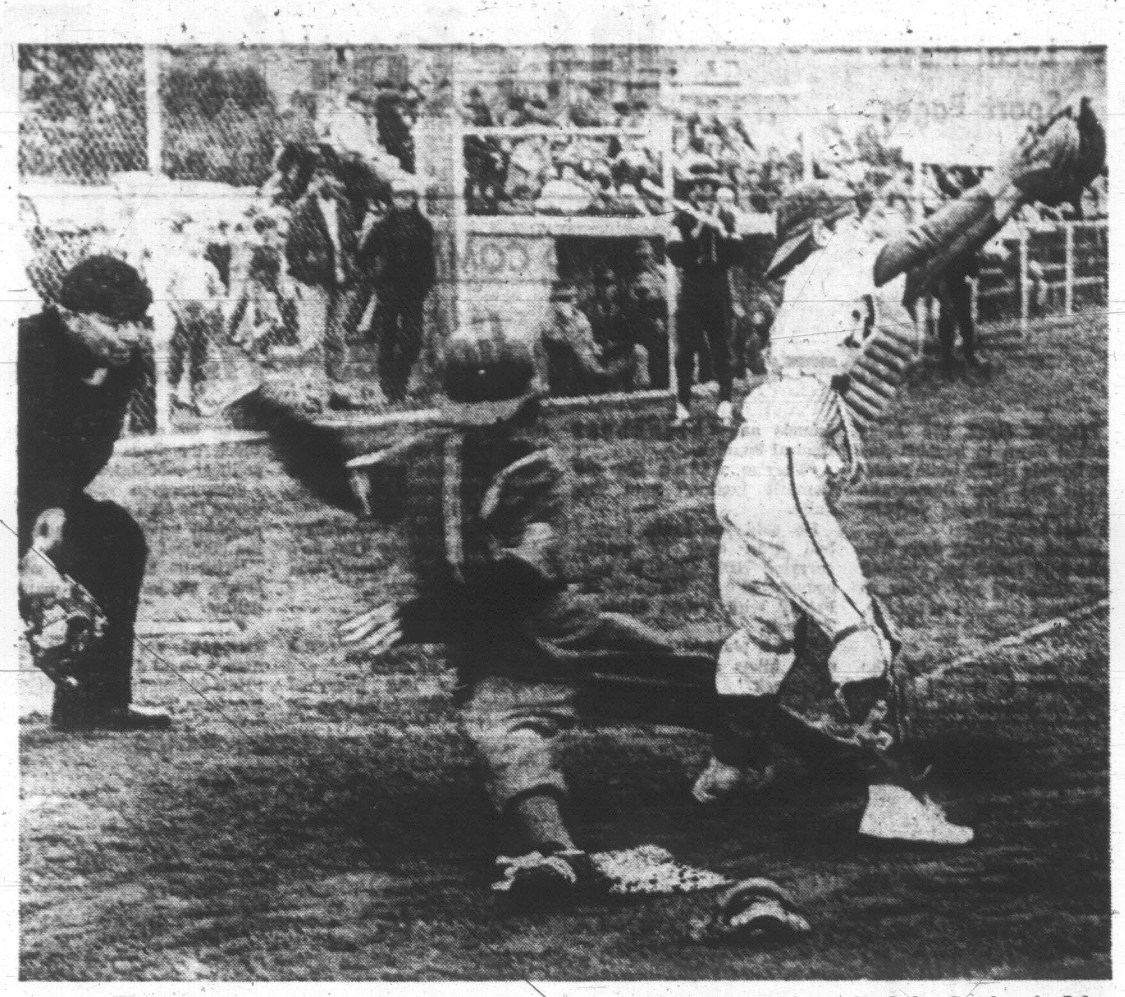
"I don't think we've seen the last of them," said manager Bill Grindlay ruefully.

"I have a suspicion we might see them again in the final."

First his squad has to get past Edmonton, and Hardisty manager Wilf Bosse was just as confident.

"For us that first game was the most important," he said. "We've shown we can hit against hard pitching, and I think we're ready to go all the way."

Valleyfield and Galt were scheduled to play at 2 this afternoon with Edmonton meeting Collingwood tonight at 6 in the double-loss-elimination tournament.



WINNING RUN in opening game of Canadian Little League baseball championships at Hampton Park, Tuesday, is scored by Edmonton Hardisty's Tom Bateman in second inning. Bateman scored on a fielder's choice as catcher Hugh Coflin grounded out with bases loaded. Catcher is John Stewart, of Quebec Valleyfield. Bate Faces Best In Test Tonight

Provincial-champion Bate Construction takes on an all-star squad made up from the remainder of the Major Men's Softball League tonight at 6:45 in Central Park.

Purpose of the exhibition contest is to raise some of the money needed to send Bate to Calgary this weekend to meet the Alberta champion.

In league play Tuesday night, Bate extended a shutout string to 23 innings with a 3-0 blanking of Luckies. Bates have not been scored against since their 4-2 victory over Vancouver Johnstons last weekend while winning the B.C. senior "A" tourney.

Consecutive singles by Doug Gregory, Bob Holness and Brian Pearce gave pitcher Barry Jackson a winning margin in the first inning. This lead was bolstered by two runs in the sixth inning of a rain-shortened contest.

GUNFIGHTER IS HOPING FOR SUN AT HIGH NOON

Garry Coe, of Portland, will be wishing for sunny skies on Sunday as he returns to fulfill a rain-postponed July 6 appearance at Van Isle Dragways.

Coe's "D" Class altered 1957 Ford, named the "Gunfighter", will be running in both exhibition and competitive matches against local machines.

The "Gunfighter", powered by a 289-cubic-inch fuel-injected engine, flashes through the quarter-mile in the 10-second bracket with speeds of over 130 miles per hour.

Coe is currently running in third position in the National Hot-Rod Association standings for Division VI.

Gates open at 9 a.m., time trials begin at 10 and eliminations get under way at 1:30 p.m.

Angling Prize Won by Joyce

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association have cancelled Sunday's scheduled "sunburn derby" because many of the Chinooks are away on vacations.

Alf Joyce had a bit of a holiday at the Inlet last month when he reeled in a 21-pound 10-ounce spring salmon to win the July trophy in VSIAA competition.

Mrs. H. Nelson took the women's award for July and Jeff Mair topped junior contestants. Hidden-weight winners were Mrs. C. Hammon, E. J. Brown, A. Rosin and Roy Fleming.

FOR CANUCK ROOKIE . . .

Here's a Day To Remember!

By The Canadian Press

Mike Kilkenny and his Canadian followers won't soon forget Tuesday, August 12, 1969.

The Bradford, Ont., native celebrated the birth of his first child, Rory Erin; pitched his first complete major league baseball game; got his first hit and run batted-in, and led Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 win over the California Angels.

Kilkenny held the Angels to a homer, double and single, walked only two batters and claimed 10 strikeouts.

Elsewhere in the American League, Reggie Jackson clubbed his league-leading 42nd home run for Oakland Athletics and Minnesota Twins restored peace in their clubhouse, but both contenders for the Western Division title were beaten.

Jackson hit a two-run homer in the top of the ninth to force a 3-3 tie with Baltimore, Eastern Division leaders, but the Orioles scored in the home half to win 4-3.

MAUL THE TWINS

New York Yankees collected 10 hits, three of them for extra bases, to maul Minnesota 10-3.

In other AL games, Chicago White Sox outscored Boston Red Sox 10-5, Cleveland Indians nipped Seattle Pilots 6-5 and Kansas City Royals downed Washington Senators 6-3.

The rain that fell on Phil Niekro and the Braves in Atlanta was nothing compared to the unexpected storm Cincinati Reds, the National League Western Division leaders, encountered in Montreal.

By sweeping a doubleheader from Cincinnati 8-3 and 5-2, the Expos cut the Reds' lead to two games over Atlanta, 2½ over Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants, and three over Houston Astros.

For the second time in two weeks, the Braves and Niekro were rained out when they had a big lead—5-0 this time—in the fourth inning of a game with Philadelphia Phillies.

CARDS CLIPPED

In other NL action Tuesday, Los Angeles stopped St. Louis Cardinals 5-2, San Francisco beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3, Houston shaded New York Mets 8-7 and Chicago Cubs blanked San Diego Padre 4-0. The Cus stretched their Eastern Division lead to 8½ games over the Mets and Cardinals.

The Reds, who outlasted a 2½-hour tornado to beat Philadelphia Saturday, invaded Montreal with a five-game winning streak while the Expos had lost six in a row. But Montreal, led by Coco Laboy, started their thunderd in the first inning of the opener and never let up.

Laboy drove in five runs, three in the first game, and pitcher Steve Renko, who won the opener with a seven-hitter, Rusty Staub and Adolfo Phillips belted solo homers.

Kilkenny had things much easier against the Angels than he did earlier in the day when he took his wife to hospital and beat the stork by nine minutes.

Making his fourth start of the season after specializing in the minor leagues as a reliever, Kilkenny, 24, a left-hander, lost his first major league shutout when Bubba Morton homered in the fifth inning for California.

Eastern Final Opens Tonight

Brooklin Redmen and Brantford Warriors meet at Brooklin tonight in the opening game of a best-of-seven series to decide the Eastern Canadian senior lacrosse championship.

The Redmen made it to the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "A" final by defeating Bramalea Excelsiors 11-4 Monday night to win a best-of-seven series in four games.

Warriors edged Peterborough Merchants 11-10 Monday to win their semi-final 4-1.

Carls' Burst Dims Outlook

VANCOUVER — Victoria Shamrocks' hopes of crashing the Western Lacrosse Association playdowns sound like the wishes of a fat man—slimmer by the minute.

Struggling through one of their most disappointing seasons, Shamrocks were all but locked out of the playoffs after dropping a 15-7 decision to third-place Vancouver Carlings on Tuesday.

Vancouver thus leads Victoria by eight points. The Carls have five games remaining while the Shamrocks have six left, including an 8:30 meeting tonight with New Westminster in Memorial Arena.

JUNIOR SPARKLES

Forward Brian Davidson, recruited from junior ranks, and Bob Salt sparked Vancouver's attack. Davidson scored five goals while Salt opened with a goal and four straight assists to get Vancouver off and running.

Trailing 9-1 after two periods, Shamrocks showed their best in the third period when they matched Vancouver goal-for-goal. Ken Akexander led Victoria with three goals and an assist while Dennis Somner (2), Nirmal Dillon and Mike Beaulac rounded out Rocks' total.

Victoria's major drawbacks Tuesday were loose checking and Vancouver goalie Don Hamilton. The goalie played strongly, especially in the first two periods.

Stampeders Drop John Schneider

CALGARY (CP) John Schneider, signed last week for a five-day trial by Calgary Stampeders, has been released after only two days.

General manager Rogers Lehew said Schneider had a sore arm and was unable to follow through on his passes.

SIMPSON ANXIOUS . . . . . TO GET STARTED

O.J. Dodges Money Talk

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — O. J. Simpson, pulling off his first broken field run as a member of Buffalo Bills, successfully avoided Tuesday any direct mention of the size of his contract but did admit he felt compelled to sign because "I did not want to sit out a year."

Two hours after his first workout with the Bills, Simpson deftly dealt with the issues that finally induced him to sign a $350,000 contract—considerably less than his asking price of $650,000.

"I was getting anxious to get something settled," the 22-year-old Heisman Trophy winner said.

At a news conference, Simpson said he would be physically ready to play Friday night's exhibition at Detroit although he was not in top shape.

JUST AN 'AGREEMENT' OR AN OUTRIGHT SALE?

Ernie Davis, owner-operator of the Kamloops Rockets of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, has confirmed the signing of a "working agreement" with Calgary Centennials of the Western Junior League.

Details of the agreement were not revealed but other sources close to the BCJHL scene indicate Rockets have been purchased outright by Scotty Munro of Calgary.

Davis said the tieup will ensure that the Rockets will be able to ice a competitive entry for the 1969-70 season. Rockets finished fifth in the six-team league last season.

More Than B.C. Open Prize At Stake for Canuck Pros

By DOUG PEDEN

On the books, the winner's purse in the $10,000 British Columbia Open this week at Uplands Golf Club is $2,000, but the manner in which a few of the Canadian professional are examining the tree-studded layout lets you know there's a possibility of a far bigger payoff.

Victory in the 54-hole tournament could be worth as much as $57,000.

If you think that sounds like a bit of publicity malarkey, just listen a minute.

This year's B.C. Open, which gets away Friday after Thursday's pro-amateur event, is the last of four qualifying events for the single Canadian berth in the Alcan Golfer-of-the-Year tournament at Portland in late September.

That one offers golf's juiciest winner's plum of $55,000, which means that if the new B.C. champ heads the list at Portland his total reward will be $57,000.

It's a longshot chance but there are a few guys practicing at Upland today who know it could happen to one of them. They have added up the figures because the coveted Canuck berth at Alcan goes to the pro with the lowest stroke total made up of his scores in the 72-hole Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship, which ended at Vancouver Sunday, plus his two best tournament tallies from the 54-hole Ontario, Quebec and B.C. Opens.

Right now, the fight for the Alcan position appears to be a four-man battle between Winnipeg's Wilf Homeniuk, Windsor pro Bob Panasiuk, Moe Norman, the colorful veteran from Gilford, Ont., and Bob Cox, the Richmond belter who made it three straight tourney triumphs by winning the CPGA crown.

Homeniuk, who was striking the ball smoothly around Uplands Tuesday, is the current leader with a total of 708 and hoping to trim a big slice off that count by improving on his Quebec Open tally of 214.

Panasuik, 215 in the Quebec event, is two strokes back at 710, just one shot in front of Norman, who tied Al Balding for third place in Vancouver at 282, two strokes behind Cox.

RATED much-improved player on Canadian pro golf circuitt his season is stylish Quebec professional Phil Giroux, who is confidently eager to tackle Uplands Golf Club in bid to win British Columbia Open tournament. Play in 54-hole event starts Friday, following Thursday's pro-amateur competition at par-70 Uplands course.

'Birdie Alley' May Help 'Em All'

Currently, the hottest piece of golf machinery on the Canadian circuit, Cox perhaps has the best shot of all at the Alcan qualifying spot because after this week's event he will probably be able to throw out his Ontario Open score of 224.

In fact, all contenders for the Alcan qualifying berth are planning to erase one of their previous 54-hole tallies because the 6,215-yard Uplands course plays to a par of 70 and offers a flood of birdie opportunities.

Following Tuesday's practice rounds, estimates of the total required to finish on top when the tourney ends Sunday ranged from 196 to 206.

Predictions of low scores were prompted mainly by "birdie alley," the six-hole stretch between the tough par-fours at 12 and 18.

Big hitters can reach three par-four holes — the 13th (300 yards), the 15th (280) and 17th (270) from the tees. Those, along with the 445-yard, dog-leg par-five 14th, offer definite possibilities for eagles and are certain to provide flocks of birdies during the three-day event. Also included in "birdie alley" is the par-three 16th.

However, trees lining the fairways along the alley can produce plenty of trouble for off-target sluggers and the length of the first 12 holes suggests that all but the sharpest swingers may have difficulty trimming par before arriving at the 13th.

Bateman Breezed With 'About 64'

With most of the visiting pros playing extra shots along the way Tuesday there were few accurate stroke counts, but several demonstrated ability to crack the present official course mark of 65.

Both the late Chuck Congdon and Vancouver pro Fred Wood set the record at Uplands on the same day in 1946, the last year the tourney was held in Victoria. Congdon, averaging 68 strokes per round, won the title and first prize of a mere $250.

Tuesday's most spectacular round was turned in by Montreal pro Trevor Bateman, who went around in "about 64." Chuck Green, one of several California pros in the tourney carded 66 after firing a 68 Monday.

Bateman was playing in a group that included burly Montreal tour regular Norman Doyle and Bill Wakeham, the defending champion from Victoria.

Wakeham was rapping the ball with length and accuracy but still fighting the putting woes that have haunted him since he won the B.C. title last year in Vancouver with three sub-par rounds on the long Shaughnessy layout.

"I'm hitting the ball well," said Wakeham, "and if I can get a few putts to drop I think I'll have a chance."

Just how well Bill and his rivals will do in the race for the Carling Cup and $2,000 will be indicated Thursday when they start firing in the pro-am event.

It could be interesting.

'Shotgun' Will Launch Instant Pro-Am Action

It will be instant action on all tees at Uplands Golf Club Thursday when a pro-amateur event launches the chase for money and prizes in this year's B.C. Open.

The 54-hole Open starts Friday and finishes Sunday while the pro-am test provides the final tuneup for title contestants and also enables amateur swingers to mingle with the pros.

Pros will be shooting for a total of $750 Thursday in team and individual prizes while their amateur partners will be chasing some tempting merchandise awards.

★ ★ ★

In the chase will be 81 threesomes, consisting of one pro and two amateurs, and each trio will compile a net, best-ball tally in bidding for team prizes.

Dunc McKenzie said Tuesday the pro-am test will be run in three sections, with each section going with a "shotgun" start that will start action on all 18 tees at the same time. Starting times will be 7:30, 11 a.m., and 4 p.m.

Makeup of the teams will be decided by a blind draw at Uplands tonight and players not in attendance may learn their starting times by calling the clubhouse.

OPEN STARTING TIMES FOR FIRST TWO ROUNDS

Competition in the British Columbia Open tournament gets under way at Uplands Golf Club Friday with contestants playing in the same threesomes for the first two days. Their positions for Sunday's final round will depend on their scores after 36 holes.

RAIN DELAYS COLT PLAYOFF

WHALLEY — Victoria All-Stars still have two chances to win the B.C. Colt League baseball crown.

Rain Tuesday washed out the scheduled final between the unbeaten Victorians and the once-beaten Surrey club. The final of the double-loss-elimination tournament was re-scheduled for this afternoon with Surrey needing two straight wins to take the title.

Air Strike Delays International Trot

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) Roosevelt Raceway's $100,000 International Trot has been postponed for one week, until Saturday, Aug. 23, because of the Pan-American Airlines strike which ended Tuesday.

George Morton Levy, president of the raceway, said it was impossible to get the European contenders to this country and back into racing condition for the original date, this coming Saturday night, at this late date.

LOGGERS SIGN SUMMERS

PORTLAND (AP) — Loggers, new Continental Football League team, have signed Donny Summers, 22, former Oregon State halfback. Summers, 5-9 and 190 pounds, was cut by Winnipeg Blue Bombers after two exhibition games.

Marilyn's Record Run Helps B.C. Claim Title

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The main event of the Canadian women's golf championships gets under way today, and with a mixture of experience and youth, the four-day match-play competition could produce a few surprises.

Ninety-six golfers — divided into championship, first and second flights of 32 golfers each teed off this morning.

Most of the attention will be on the championship flight that contains strong representation from British Columbia and Ontario, including the 1968 open and closed women's champion, Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonthill, Ont.

Other golfers who made the 168 cut after 36 holes of medal-play qualifications Monday and Tuesday included Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, low qualifier this year with par 146; the 1969 Canadian junior women's champion, Lisa King of London, Ont.; and Gail Harvey Moore of Vancouver, first-round leader with a par 73.

STEALS THE SHOW

Tuesday's play produced exciting golf, with Miss Palmer stealing the show from B.C. team-mate Mrs. Moore. Miss Palmer, 22, who has been playing golf since she was 12, shot a three-under-par 70 for a course record at the Moncton Golf and Country Club.

Added to her 76 Monday, Tuesday's round gave the pretty blonde a four-stroke margin over Mrs. Moore, who shot 77 in the second round for a 150.

The Palmer and Moore scores helped defending champion British Columbia to a narrow one-stroke win over Ontario in the 36-hole senior interprovincial team event. B.C. had 458 to Ontario's 459, while Quebec finished third with 476.

Miss King, playing in her first national tournament, wrapped up the junior individual title Tuesday by coming from behind to defeat Ontario team-mate Andrea Stoddart of Oak Ridges and Helen Marlatt of Chilliwack, the British Columbia junior team captain.

Miss King, knocked four strokes off her first round 82, finished strongly with 78 for a 160 total—one stroke better than the 161 carded by Miss Stoddart and Miss Marlatt.

It was the London junior's improved play which helped Ontario take the junior team championship, holding off the two-some of Miss Marlatt and Holly Botham of Pitt Meadows, B.C.

Ontario, which had a one-stroke lead at the end of play Monday, held on to edge British Columbia 321 to 323. Saskatchewan was third with 342.

Carol Trims Kathy's Lead In Cash Race

CINCINNATI (AP) — Carol Mann is closing in again on Kathy Whitworth in the battle for the leading money winner on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association's 1969 tour.

LPGA headquarters report that Miss Mann's second-place finish Sunday in the tournament at Springfield, Ohio, boosted her money total to $29,547. That is only slightly more than $2,400 behind Miss Whitworth's total of $31,991.

Miss Mann picked up $2,300 as she finished second to Marlene Hagge at Springfield.

The leaders:

Kathy Whitworth, $31,991; Carol Mann, $29,547; Sandra Haynie, $22,995; Donna Caponi, $22,510; Shirley Englehorn, $18,224; Murle Lindstrom, $18,175; Sue Berning, $17,228; Mickey Wright, $15,584; Sandra Spuzich, $15,473; Sandra Palmer, $13,930.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., is 21st with earnings of $7,230.

Century Transforms Errors Into Victory

Century Inn turned six Denford Electric errors into a 3-0 shutout Tuesday in the opening game of the double-loss elimination playoff for a berth in the B.C. senior "B" men's softball tournament.

Century collected three unearned runs in the fourth inning at Heywood Avenue Park on two singles and four of the errors.

Winner of the three-team tourney travels to Kelowna and the provincial playoffs over the Labor Day weekend.

Langford Drywall, of the Major Men's League, meets Century tonight at 6:45 in Heywood. Century and Denford are teams in the Stuffy McGinnis loop.

CELTS, SEALS IN SAME FIRM

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics, winningest team in pro basketball, was sold Tuesday in a $6,000,000 transaction involving Trans National Communications Inc. of New York and P. Ballantine Sons Brewery.

Trans National, which owns Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League, will acquire ownership of the Celtics, while Ballantine will acquire a substantial stock interest in Trans National under terms of the agreement which is subject to approval by the National Basketball Association.

Kid Gavilan Gets New Job

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Kid Gavilan, who earned some $2,000,000 as a boxing champion, has accepted a $5,000-a-year job working with children in Tampa's model cities program.

Tht 43-year-old former fighter, now 56 pounds above his fighting weight of 147 when he retired in 1958, came to Tampa last fall to have a cataract removed from his right eye. He said he soon will have a similar operation on his left eye.

While waiting for his last surgery to heal he decided he liked Tampa enough to make it his new home town.

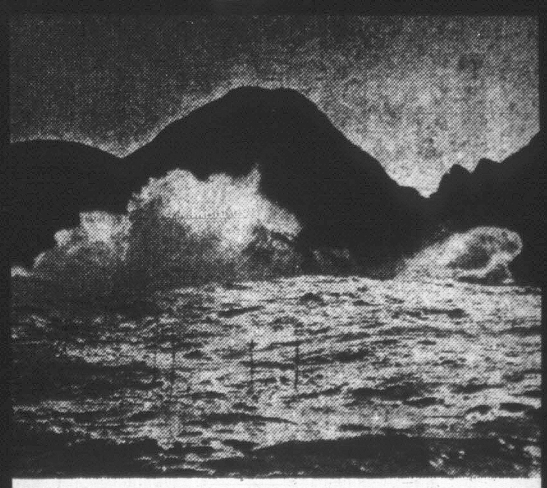
we grew up in a tough neighbourhood



It was tough 44 years ago when Island started, and things haven't changed. The backyard is twelve thousand miles of mountainous, indented coastline. Beyond that the open Pacific.

Island's tugs and reputation have grown in this environment. Trans-Pacific tows? Just routine assignments. Salvage capabilities? Island's salvage tugs are in a class by themselves. Ocean-going barges? Island has the biggest of their kind afloat ... and the largest tug in the Pacific to tow them.

In a tough neighbourhood you learn to handle any situation the right way first time ... and a lot of people have learned to bank on Island's experience.

Givan's Pace One to Match

The favorites are off and running and "young" Harry Givan stands up as the one they'll chase hardest in the 47th annual Seniors North West Golf Association tournament.

Favorites all cleared Tuesday's first-round hurdle, were back on the first tee at Victoria Golf Club for today's quarter-finals.

Including Givan, Monday's medallist and a former U.S. amateur champion, the Seattle Club ace rolled by Stewart Cooper of Vancouver, two up.

Givan's game and credentials are among the most impressive. He also has youth on his side, having qualified for seniors competition only three years ago.

Givan's control of golf sticks is such that he astounded playing partners at the weekend by belting out impressive "drives" by using his putter off the tee. That was all in fun, but it was enough to remind all of Givan's credentials. Those include Walker Cup competition, seven appearances in the PNGA's amateur finals, (including four victories), and last year's title triumph in the seniors' show at Oak Bay.

In addition to Givan, Dr. George Bigelow, of Victoria, Spokane's Dr. Mel Aspray and Bill Blakely of Portland were other favorites to step into today's round.

FOURTH ATTEMPT

Canadian seniors champion Dr. Bigelow made his move towards a fourth straight North West final by clipping another Victorian, Bill Sanford, 5 and 4.

Six-time winner Blakely overpowered Vancouver's Jack Edgell 4 and 2 while Aspray, another former champion, tripped Victoria's A. H. Alexander, 4 and 3.

In other matches Tuesday, Don Woodward of Walla Walla, Wash., defeated Nels Perkins of Tacoma, 2 and 1; Portland's Fran Andrews clipped A. W. Johnson of Vancouver by the same margin; Ernie Jonson of Seattle downed Gord Verley of Victoria, 2 and 1, and Bob Palmer sidelined Murray Marsh 5 and 4 in an all-Seattle meeting.

FAIRWAY JAUNT OF 85 HOLES MATCHES AGE

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Dr. R. C. Spandler, a retired professor of botany and biology at West Virginia University, played 85 holes of golf in observance of his 85th birthday.

Spangler let fly with a total 435 over the hilly Morgantown Country Club course — and it only took 12 hours.

He walked the entire course and a club pro estimated the distance at more than 25 miles.

Summer Hockey

Duncan downed Queen's Own Rifles 4-1 and Saanich Wings bounced Sooke 4-2 Monday in Summer Hockey League play at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Gorge Forces Finale

Only one runner went past second base in a Senior Amateur Baseball League pitching duel, but it was enough for Gorge to collect a 1-0 victory and force a deciding game in the best-of-three semi-final series with Transport Workers.

Winning pitcher Doug Hill issued three walks and struck out only one while loser Bob Mabee allowed only one base-on-balls and struck out two batters.

Each gave up three hits in the Royal Athletic Park contest.

The difference came in the fifth inning when Tony Cosier and George Holt both took base on errors. Stan Gibb then connected for a single which scored Cosier with the game's only run.

Deciding game of the Independents-Greaves series will take place tonight at 6:30 with the other semi scheduled Thursday.

Hockey Referees Form New Group

TORONTO (CP) — Formation of the National Hockey League Referees and Linesman Association was announced Tuesday by Joseph Kane, legal counsel for the group. Kane is former president of the Central Hockey League.

He said the objects of the association are to improve the image of referees and linesmen with players, management and the public, and to create a better understanding of the role played by the referees and linesmen.

Warren Tops Tanner Record

MONTREAL (CP)—Jeanne Warren, of Vancouver, and George Smith, of Edmonton, were the record breakers in the second day of the national swimming championships at suburban Pointe Claire Tuesday.

Miss Warren broke Elaine Tanner's Canadian closed record in the 400-metre individual medley by swimming the distance in 5:24.9. Miss Tanner's mark of 5:25.3 was set in 1966.

"I've really been training hard in recent weeks for this meet," said Miss Warren. "Naturally I'm thrilled to beat Elaine's mark."

Smith also set his record in the 400-metre individual medley with a time of 4:48.0. He knocked 3.8 seconds off the Canadian closed record held jointly by Ralph Hutton and Sandy Gilchrist. He also knocked 2-10 seconds off the Canadian open record held by Bill Utley.

CAME ON STRONG

Smith seemed to come on stronger in the last 50 metres. He explained that he was thinking of his time in the last leg and was trying harder to set the record.

He had a slow qualifying heat in the morning of 4:53.9.

Meanwhile, Jim Shaw showed why he is Canadian champion in the 100 metre backstroke. Shaw won Tuesday's final in 1:03.5, just off his own Canadian closed record of 1:01.2.

John Hawes, the day's leading qualifier for the 100-metre backstroke, finished third behind Shaw and Calgary's Brad Storey.

Other winners in Tuesday's finals were Toronto's Angela Coughlan in the women's 200-metre freestyle, Donna-Marie Gurr of Vancouver in the 100-metre backstroke and Bob Kasting of Lethbridge, Alta., in the men's 200-metre freestyle.

OFF THE MARK

Miss Coughlan covered the 200-metre distance in 2:13.2, 2-10 of a second off her Canadian closed mark.

"I was hoping to go a bit faster," said Miss Coughlan, adding that she was looking forward to the 400-metre freestyle today.

Miss Coughlan, 17, also qualified for the finals in the 400-metre individual medley earlier in the day but decided not to race because her "legs felt funny."

Her coach, Nick Therrien, said that he thought three races had been too much for young Angela.

Miss Gurr, who covered the 100-metre backstroke in 1:10.6, was happy with her race but disappointed with her time.

Last week in the British nationals she was timed in 1:08.7.

Two Alberni swimmers were the only entrants from Vancouver Island to show up among the results. Sandy Shearer and Grant Treloar both placed second in the men's 400-metre individual medley heats. Neither placed among the first six in the final.

CITY BOWLERS IN TITLE MEET

Victoria fivepin aces Vera Lysne and Stan Jones, current Master Bowlers' Association of B.C. singles champions, clash with MBA of Ontario's titlists in the second annual Masters Canadian championship Sept. 1 in Vancouver.

Norah Oakley of Toronto and Joe Chiki of Welland, the Ontario reps, will meet the Victoria twosome at the Pacific National Exhibition.

Thetis Lake Swim Races Slated Sunday

Swimmers of all ages will find races to suit their abilities Sunday at the annual Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen-sponsored Thetis Lake gala.

Entry forms for the main event, a 2½-mile contest for competitors 16 years old or over, must be submitted by Friday.

They are available from the YM-YWCA, A. Morrison (384-0528) and L. J. Cook (386-6606).

Races of 50-yards in several age groups will keep the youngsters under 16 busy and require no entry forms.

Boats and lifeguards will keep the contestants under constant surveillance.

Defending-champion Jim Gollmer is expected back for another distance-swim victory, along with a good number of last year's competitors. The splashfest gets under way at 1:30 p.m.

Second Test Drawn As Storm Ends Play

NOTTINGHAM (CP) — Rain saved the visiting New Zealand cricket team against England Tuesday as the second test match was drawn.

The New Zealanders, batting between showers, took their second inning total from 37 for no wicket to 66 for 1 before a fresh storm ended the game.

England had led by 157 runs on the first innings and could feel that the luck of the weather was against them.

Graham Dowling and Bruce Murray scored 61 runs for the first wicket—the best for New Zealand in the test matches this season. Murray finished with 40 not out.

England won the first test. There is one more test match to come—at the Oval in London, starting Aug. 21.

Results of other Tuesday matches:

Leicestershire 289 for 8 declared; Lancashire 214 for 5. A draw.
Derbyshire 132 and 56 for 7. Glamorgan 209. A draw.
Somerset 159 and 199 for 9 declared. Yorkshire 129 and 196 for 7. A draw.
Gloucestershire defeated Worcestershire. Worcestershire 98 and 103; Gloucestershire 258 for 4 declared.
Hampshire 161 and 137 for 6; Middlesex 349 for 9 declared. A draw.
Surrey defeated Essex. Essex 236 and 130; Surrey 272 and 98 for 4.

There Are No Local Issues: They're Everywhere—Berger

BY ED GOULD

DUNCAN — There are no "local issues" in the Aug. 27 election campaign, New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger told a news conference Tuesday.

Speaking in support of former leader Robert Strachan, Berger said the issues are the same in every constituency in the province: pollution, secondary industry, education and "the presence of a tremendous amount of political patronage in the Social Credit government."

Strachan said he would not have supported Berger at the start if he had campaigned on promised ice rinks, community centres and swimming pools.

"We are fighting for the upgrading of medical and mental health facilities. We are the party with social policy — not a grab bag brought out only at election time."

'EXCESS BAGGAGE'

Berger said the government's ministers-without-portfolio are "just so much excess baggage" and his party, if elected, will dispense with them and extend more help to the ministers who are overworked.

"Many government ministrys are overworked and unable to cope," Berger said. "Lands, forests and water resources should be broken down into more than one department.

"Williston finds he has more laws than he has time to enforce. Loffmark is overwhelmed by the pollution problems and Brothers obviously is not even aware of the problems in education."

Aske if he would carry an extra portfolio such as attorney-general, Berger said he would prefer to be free to "properly handle the job of premier of the province."

'GOOD LIFE' HIT

Berger scored the government for the use of its campaign slogan "The Good life" in advertising B.C. Hydro parity bonds and noted that other government agencies, including the human rights commission, are subtly comapaigning for the government's return.

"This is campaigning on taxpayers' money," he said.

He said an ombudsman "of the highest qualifications," will be appointed at the first session of the legislature if an NDP government is elected.

Hansard, long proposed by Strachan at other sessions, also would be one of the first pieces of legislative business.

Rather than continue to extend "Bennet's welfare state which has the highest payment of social welfare benefits in history," and NDP government would create opportunities for unemployed to develop skills and "provide human satisfaction from worthwhile endeavor."

LORD THOMSON SEEKS PLACE IN THE SUN

QUALICUM BEACH — Lord Thomson of Fleet, the Canadian-born newspaper magnate, said here he is visiting British Columbia to see if he can buy The Vancouver Sun.

Then he added: "That's good for a-laugh, isn't it?"

Later he said seriously: "Just give me a hint that it's for sale and I'll be there in a minute."

Lord Thomson has been staying with friends here. He said he has "no business of any sort to conduct."

Lord Thomson owned the now defunct Vancouver News Herald as part of his North American chain of newspapers.

He has since won world fame as proprietor of The Times of London, the London Sunday Times, the former Kemsley chain of British provincial papers and various newspapers in the United States and the West Indies.

GULF ISLAND FIELD SURVEY READY TO GO

Field work on a planning survey of the Gulf Islands should get under way in the first two weeks of September.

The study is being carried out at the request of residents of the islands by the Capital Region Planning Board, with finance from the Regional District.

Planner A. H. Roberts said such basic information as maps, an outline of water rights and assessment and details of topography is coming in rapidly.

AUCTIONEER FINED $50 FOR NEGLECTING HORSE

DUNCAN — Keith McCausland, 43, president of Farmer's Auction of Cobble Hill, was fined $50 after being convicted in provincial court Tuesday of failing to provide adequate care to an animal.

The charge arose after a June 6 incident in which a horse shipped to auction from the United States suffered a deep leg cut in a truck on a B.C. ferry from the mainland.

Crown counsel Alastair MacDonald said the horse stood uncared for at the auctioneer's property on the Trans-Canada Highway while waiting to be sold. It went without care, food or water for many hours while its leg bled profusely, MacDonald said.

The horse was later bought and is recovering under the care of John Bateman of Cobble Hill.

Defence counsel Thomas Lines said the case was one in which "everybody gets emotional" because an animal is involved.

The resultant furore had amounted almost to a "witch hunt" when his client's job was only to sell what was on his property. It was not his horse, he said.

A request for acquittal was denied by Magistrate George Hallett who said McCausland owned the property and should have looked after the horse while it was there.

Man, 25, Jailed

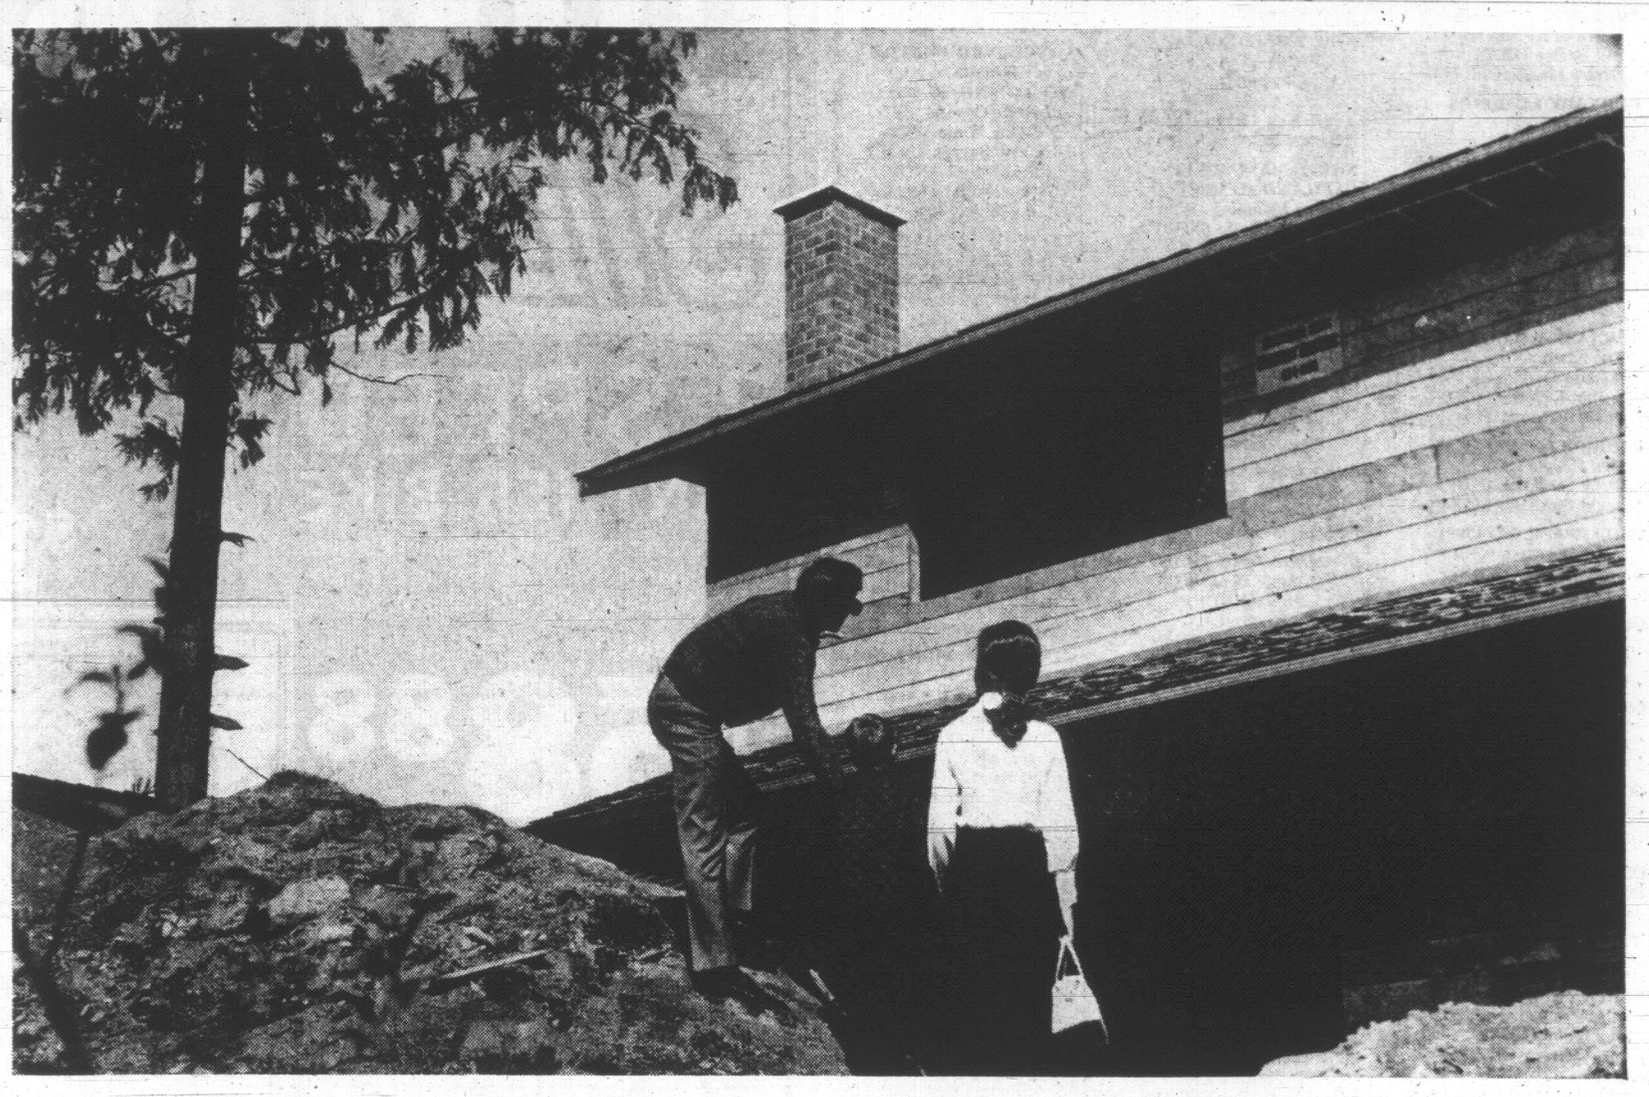
NANAIMO (CP) — Wayne Philip Shewfelt, 25, of Nanaimo, was sentenced to 18 months Monday after being found guilty of trafficking in marijuana.

The case was the first trial resulting from a mid-May Vancouver Island drug round-up.

Skipper's Body Found at Sooke

SOOKE—A body pulled from Sooke Inlet was identified Tuesday as that of Sulo Arpe, 49, of Delta, B.C., washed overboard from the fishpacker Skeena Aug. 3 when a barge towed by the vessel grounded on Race Rocks, west of Victoria.

Arpe was skipper of the Skeena M.



Pet Restrictions Urged in Duncan

DUNCAN—The city is overrun with stray animals and should pass a bylaw limiting the number of pets to any one household to three, Ald. G. A. Kerr told city council.

Kerr said the local SPCA destroyed 218 cats and "a large number of dogs" during July.

"Some of these were lovely animals but we are going to have to take some action against their proliferation. There are areas of the city which are overrun with them."

Council took no action on the proposal.

KITTEN ATTACKED

Kerr told of a German Shepherd that had attacked a Siamese kitten that ran from the arms of a young girl sitting on her front steps.

Hysterical, the child watched while the dog, which had run from its master on to the private property, attacked the cat, breaking its back.

"The owner paid for the cat, but what is there to compensate for the shock to that child?" Kerr said.

He said he had had many such incidents reported to him and others of animal neglect.

Kerr is currently making a study of certain areas of the city where more than 1,200 cats run rampant over a four-block area.

"I like animals as well as anyone else but if rabies or another disease took hold among the overabundance of animals in Duncan, we woujld be in serious shape."

13 Islanders Named Centennial Captains

Thirteen Vancouver Island residents have been named captians of the "specialty teams" on the Biritish Columbia Centennial '71 Committee approved by government order-in-council.

A total of 22 sub-committee chairmen will hold key positions in the province-wide celebrations during the 100th anniversary of British Columbia's entry into Canadian Confederation.

Victoria chairmen are: Rear Admiral J. A. Charles, armed services liasion; J. H. Panton, community organization; J. R. Meredith, educational activities; A. E. Webb, intra-governmental co-ordination; E. T. Staley, labor activities; J. K. Nesbitt, pioneer recognition; Bert Sutton, printing; J. E. Brown, projects commemorative; Seth Halton and K. M. MacDonald, publications co-chairmen, and Mrs. G. R. Pearkes, women's activities.

Other Island chairmen are: G. E. Wellburn, Duncan, historic commemorations; R. P. Clifton, Courtenay, native Indians participation; A. H. Emmott, Burnaby, youth activities.

FUND DRIVE FOR POOL

DUNCAN — A campaign to raise funds for the Duncan-North Cowichan swimming pool will be launched Sept. 15 provided assurance is given that a referendum goes to the taxpayers shortly after that.

Pat Moore, chairman of the service club fund-raising committee, told a meeting Tuesday night his group hopes to raise between $50,000 and $100,000. Estimated cost of the pool is $400,000.

The referendum would seek to raise that amount. Mayor Jim Quaife said the finance committees of the city and municipality would meet soon and assurance sought that the referendum would go ahead soon after the fund-raising campaign begins.

Home-buyer help that keeps on growing reflects a government interested in people

Return the Bennett Team!

Your Social Credit Government was the first provincial government in Canada to establish funds to help people buy homes. The outright $1000 Home Acquisition Grants and the $5000 Second Mortgage Loans, — at less than the current N.H.A. first mortgage rate — have helped thousands of British Columbia's citizens buy the homes they want.

Now, Premier Bennett pledges that these programs will keep on growing by enabling the purchase of old as well as new homes . . . further proof that no other government in Canada does as much for people as this government!

BURNING BAN IN OREGON LOOMING

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Gov. Tom McCall declared a health and safety emergency in Oregon's lower Willamette Valley Tuesday night and said he would move quickly to ban all open field burning in three counties.

When officials returned to Eugene Tuesday afternoon they found the air pollution "the worst it's been in years," said a city official.

The city was blanketed by a heavy cloud of smoke.

Oregon seed growers burn their fields to destroy disease and parasites. They insist they would go out of business if not allowed to burn.

State police reported Tuesday that smoke covered some 400 square miles of the lower Willamette Valley.

Japanese Steel Men Here To Look at Coal Picture

A close-up look at western Canada's coal reserves and discussion with industrial and government spokesmen is on the agenda for a nine-man team of Japanese steel men arriving in Vancouver today.

After courtesy calls and tours of port facilities in Vancouver, the group will come to Victoria Sunday and visit the provincial government Monday.

In all, senior representatives of seven major Japanese steel companies will take part in a three-week study in Canada, where sales of western coal have been arranged for up to 15 years and from which 150 million tons of coal will be shipped at a rate of 10 million tons a year.

Hisamoto Cho, of Nippon Kokan Kabushiki Kaisha, who has led Japanese groups in negotiations for Canadian coal over the past several years, is leader of the delegation.

Other representatives taking part are Takeshi Kakite and Monotosuke Mitsui, also of Nippon Kokan Kaisha; Katsushige Tanaka, Yawata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd.; Takao Sunayama, Fuji Iron and Steel Co. Ltd.; Eiji Shibata, Kawasaki Steel Corp.; Toshihisa Shibata, Simitomo Metal Industries Ltd.; Tadashi Moriyasu, Kobe Steel Ltd., and Manjiro Uchiyama, Nisshin Steel Co. Ltd.

They will visit operations of Kaiser Industries and Fording River Coal Co. Ltd. in B.C.; Roberts Bank deep sea terminal, Neptune Terminals and Pacific Coast Bulk Terminals; MacIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd., Lascar Consolidation Coal Co. Inc., and Coleman Collieries Ltd., all in Alberta.

After visits to Calgary, Banff, Hinton, Grande Cache, Luscar and Edmonton, the party will fly to Ottawa for calls on the Japanese embassy, the federal government, the Dominion Coal Board, Canada-Japan Trade Council and National Harbors Board.

Moving to Montreal the Japanese will meet Cominco representatives, Japanese trading firms and the CPR. The visit ends in Montreal Sept. 4.

Cugat Recovering

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Band leader Xavier Cugat, in hospital since July 29 with a stroke, says he expects to return to the stage next month. His wife, Charo, said Tuesday the 69-year-old musician would leave the hospital within a few days.

Body Identified

MATSQUI (CP)—Police identified the body of a man pulled Tuesday from a backwater of the Fraser River as Earl John Wesley, 55, of Surrey, B.C. He disappeared Aug. 4 while fishing. His body was found on the Matsqui Indian Reserve.

Only Prize Air Canada Apologies

If Air Canada phones and says you can win $500 merely by phoning another number, be suspicious. It isn't Air Canada.

A spokesman for the airline said Tuesday these gracious, if wrong, offers have been going out to Victoria area residents since the strike that tied up its routes ended in later May.

The caller, sometimes a man and sometimes a woman, has had as many as three expectant winners call Air Canada to collect nothing but apologies.

There is no such prize, said the spokesman. There isn't even a contest.

Senate Will Probe U.S. Military Clubs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports of illegal activities within the worldwide, multi-million dollar operation of U.S. military officer and noncommissioned officer clubs will be investigated by a Senate subcommittee.

Senator Abraham Ribicoff (Dem. Conn.) said his investigative group will hold hearings in September. He raised an eyebrow Tuesday when Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird disclosed the army has been looking into the problem since last October.

The senator said his investigators were in South Vietnam from March to July but got "no indication that the army is either equipped or inclined to police itself" on this matter.

Pentagon officials indicated there is concern over the possibility of huge rake-offs of the profits by military men operating the facilities.

One congressional source suggested some uniformed operators of military clubs could be getting kickbacks from high-paid entertainers they hire for the troops.

Defence spokesman Jerry Friedheim, indicating the scope of the problem, said it involved millions of dollars.

Gunman Kills Lennon Father At Golf Range

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William H. Lennon has been killed by a mysterious gunman only weeks from achieving his greatest ambition—to see his four singing daughters in their own television show.

The 54-year-old father of 11 was shot down Tuesday at the Marina Del Rey golf range where he was an instructor.

Police investigators, who said they had no clues to the killer's motive or identity, received this account from witnesses:

Lennon was standing by his car when a man carrying a rifle approached. An argument took place, followed by a struggle for the gun.

A shot went wild. Lennon, shouting "Help!", started running across the parking lot. The killer, a tall, bearded white man about 35, fired twice and Lennon fell. The gunman walked closer and fired a third time.

The killer, wearing blue trousers and a green sweater, fled in a small blue and white car.

The Lennons lived in a 40-year-old house in Venice, a seaside suburb of Los Angeles. Once of modest size, it grew room by room as the brood of children increased.

In a recent interview, Lennon told how the first addition was paid for with the help of his singing daughters.

He had run out of money for lumber, so he began getting the girls singing jobs at small parties. Their first paycheque: $10.

"Eventually they were hired to sing at an Elks Club affair and it just happened that Lawrence Welk Jr. was there," Lennon said. An audition with Welk Sr. was arranged, and the rest is history.

The new Lennon Sisters series, to be aired over ABC-TV Friday evenings starting Sept. 26, will be called The Lennon Sisters' Hour. A spokesman said the first five episodes already were in tape.

Lennon, Chicago-born, moved to Los Angeles with his parents while still an infant. Once a professional singer, he also had worked in earlier years for the Douglas Aircraft Co. and drove trucks for a soft drink company and a milk firm. After years of managing his daughters' act, he turned to teaching golf.

Before the Judge

David R. Rallison, 1210 Haultain, who drove a truck while his licence was suspended so he could earn money to feed his family was fined $100 in provincial court Tuesday.

"I admire you for working ti upkeep your family," Judge William Ostler told Rallison, who pleaded guilty to the offence. "But it would have been better if you had sought social assistance rather than to break the law."

Patrick J. Higgins, 1270 Tracksell, who pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana, was sen- $500 in default four months in jail.

He was also asked to post $500 or one surety to keep the peace for eight months.

William M. Blau, 308 Oswego, charged with possessing marijuana, elected trial by jury. He was remanded by Judge Ostler until Sept. 19 for preliminary inquiry.

Douglas Toole, charged with trafficking in narcotics, also elected trial by jury. Preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 2.

POT ROAST OLD COUNTRY STYLE

2 lbs. Chuck Roast (about 2 inches thick) one clove garlic quartered, 2 tbisp. vegetable oil, 2 tbisp. butter, 1 clove garlic minced, 1 small onion, chopped; 2 tsp. oregano, 1 tsp. thyme, ½ tsp. basil, ⅛ tsp. cinnamon, 1 lb. spaghetti, grated parmesan or romano cheese.

Make 4 slits in roast, and insert quarters of garlic, tie meat if necessary to hold shape. Heat oil and butter in large kettle, brown meat on all sides, remove meat and lower heat, add minced garlic and next 7 seasonings, cook gently about 5 minutes being careful not to burn. Return meat, mix paste with water and pour over meat. Bring to a full boil, lower heat and cover loosely, simmer slowly about 2 hours, turning meat occasionally. When meat is tender and sauce thickened, cook spaghetti, drain and put in large shallow dish, cover with most of the sauce, sprinkle with cheese and mix lightly. Serve with remaining sauce and sliced meat. Serves 4 to 6.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1969 —PAGE 27

A fly ball to centrefield can give a mother tense moments as players wait for the ball to fall lazily into a mitt. Mrs. Ross Barclay anxiously watches the outfielders move into position. She doesn't have a son on the British Columbia team but she cheered them in their battle against the Ontario boys. Beside her is daughter Shona.

Great-grandmother, Mrs. Maggie Hannah, of Vancouver, checks her scoresheet as the Vancouver Collingwoods come up to bat. Great-grandson Robbie Hannah played in the game which saw his team beat Ontario 2-0. Robbie's aunt, Betty Feenie, leans over Mrs. Hannah's shoulder.

One, Two, Three, Four, Who Are We For?

By JUDI FREEMAN

It had all the flavor of a big-time game for fans watching the Little League baseball championships at Hampton Park, Tuesday.

Hot dogs sold like, well, hot dogs. Flags flapped behind the bleachers as a stray balloon escaped the sticky hands of a youngster and floated into the wire fence separating the crowd and the players.

A tense mother set up her own brand of infield chatter to get her shortstop son to move in on those grounders.

And then out stepped the pint-sized cheerleaders.

"One two, three, four who are we for?" they sang out to a high kick routine with plenty of pom-pom shaking.

"B.C., B.C, yea team!"

And with one last flourish, the six little blondes ran from the field.

The fans, diverted for a minute by the novelty of cheer leaders at a baseball game, turned back to watch the Vancouver Collingwood team trounce the Galt Nationals 2-0.

In keeping with the Little League scale, none of the mini-skirted cheerleaders was older than seven years. Each and every one was blue-eyed, blonde-haired and lightly dusted with freckles across the nose.

Dressed in purple and gold uniforms, the girls gave the four cheers they have learned in the short space of two weeks.

Mrs. Ross Barclay, who taught the girls their steps, said she and three other mothers were asked by tournament director Wilf Cain a month ago it they could put together a cheering squad.

Mrs. Barclay gathered together the girls, three of whom had cheered for her at Little League games last season, and the other members of her committee started making the outfits.

Tuesday's game was the culmination of the month's work. The girls, eager to cheer for their side, clamored to get on the field and "Send 'em into orbit!"

Mrs. Barclay laughed when asked how they managed to get six identical moppets for the squad.

"We never really noticed," she said.

Committee members are Pat Skaalrud, Mickie Medd and Grace Wilson.

Girls on the squad are Shona Barclay, Sandy Medd, Jacqueline Brens, Bonnie Wilson and Deena and Darlene Skaalrud.

Don't Run for a Taxi in a Maxi

By JUDITH MARTIN

Don't hang it on a low-slung coat rack, and don't forget to dust your closet floors. Don't carry it tossed over your arm, or its arms will paddle along on the sidewalk beside you.

But properly treated, a maxi will teach a girl good posture, keep her warm and clean and develop ladylike manners in her — which is a lot more than most mothers can manage to instill.

The maxi-coat, one fashion writer says, "strides importantly into the busy life of the North American woman". This coachman design is of coral red double-knit Ottoman wool, with a deep walking pleat in back.

You have to walk with small, straight steps in a maxi, or you'll get your nose in the puddles running for a taxi. It keeps mud, soot and icicles from forming on the backs of your legs. It changes the typical feminine hand gesture from that of tugging a tiny skirt over a big bottom to the daintiness of lifting long skirts, curtsy-fashion, to climb curbs and steps.

MAXI RAINCOAT

Many of the maxis which have been sold so far are raincoats. They're a smaller commitment for the customer (30 to 90 dollars), but the stores are taking it as encouragement that the winter supply (55 to 3,000 dollars) will go when the time comes.

If not, there are going to be some mighty big evening coat departments opening, or a heavy supply of exceptionally cozy bathrobes.

What the customers are doing with the ones they've already bought is a mystery. In New York, people wear them. In Washington, they put them on to wear in chic-hippie areas and whip them out of sight when they get to a more conservative block.

The stores, nonetheless, think that maxis have lovable commercial qualities, and they're ordering them just as if they had never heard of the great midi fiasco of 1968.

Maxis, they figure:

Make your last year's coat look like a chopped off old rag.

Use ever so much more material, at lots and lots a yard.

Require huge fur hats (60 dollars and up) and long, long scarves (20 dollars and up) to go with them.

Do not end expensive alterations, because while a too-long short coat is dowdy, a too-long coat is a safety hazard.

When Skin Sags on Face and Neck

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

The display is sponsored by the Esquimalt Chapter No. 41, Order of the Eastern Star and is the work of 26 students and former students of Brian Travers-Smith.

Mr. Travers-Smith has donated one painting to the display which will be sold with the students' paintings.

Marriage Off, Says Judge

LIMA, Peru (AP) — No honeymoon, no marriage, a judge ruled in acquitting Oscar Pereyra of bigamy charges. Pereyra said he was married four years ago to a schoolteacher who refused to honeymoon with him and went off to stay with friends instead. She filed the charges recently after Pereyra married another woman.

Beauty Advice

". . . I have never yet seen a finer method of improving the complexion. Wrinkles are smoothed, dryness is checked, blemishes vanish and the skin takes on a healthy, youthful look . . ." (Extract from a report by Margaret Merril suggesting the use of the moist tropical oil of Olay as a powder base.) Most druggists are now able to obtain supplies of this oil which gives glorious loveliness to the skin.

"I'm calling my book 'Loafing from A to Z.'"

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Mrs. Farmer,

I have just completed a sewing course and loved every minute of it, and yet, I feel rather insecure because I feel there is so much more that I don't know. How does one ever get enough confidence to feel they can really sew well without lessons?Judy M.

Dear Judy,

There's an old saying that in effect sounds like this: "The more you learn, the more you realize the less you knew." When you are learning any skill, sewing, painting, cooking, all you can do in the first few lessons is to learn the basics plus enthusiasm. As you proceed, the more you will want to learn.

I have women in my classes who have come for more than four or five courses, not because they didn't learn but because they wanted to achieve perfection. If any professional gives a lecture that I haven't heard, you may be sure that I would be in the front row.

It is vitally important to keep up with changing fabrics, and styles which in turn have a changing effect on construction methods. Many women find that sewing classes stimulate their interest as well as guarantee successful results; there is no limit to what any of us can learn.

Dear Mrs. Farmer:

I just love the sheer pleated fabrics that are being used for dressy clothes and am fascinated with the way the hem sort of ruffles out. The dress I tried to copy was very expensive, so I decided to make one.

I had my fabric permanent pleated but was so disappointed when the hem didn't curl out but was pressed in very sharp and tight. Will pressing change the appearance or did I do something wrong when I had it pleated? — Mary C.

Dear Mary:

My guess is that you hemmed the sheer fabric before you took it to be permanent pleated. If you did this, you would naturally have a sharp look at the hem because it would have all been pleated together. What you should have done in order to get the soft ruffled look at the hem is to actually roll the hem after the fabric was pleated.

I think you can still change your dress since you would only have to make it about ½ inch shorter than it is now. Cut off the original rolled hem and redo it. I can see your painful expression about having to do it twice, but I think the end result will be worth the extra work.

TODAY'S RECIPE

COOK'S CHOICE HASH

Two cups chopped cooked roast beef, lamb, veal, ham, pork, canned corned beef, tongue or luncheon meat; 3 cups chopped, cold cooked potatoes; ½ cup minced onion; 1 tsp. salt; ¼ tsp. pepper; ¼ cup skim milk powder (optional); 1-3 cup milk or undiluted evaporated milk; 2 tsp. vegetable oil.

Combine chopped meat, chopped potatoes, onions, salt, pepper, skim milk powder, milk. Heat salad oil in large skillet; spread hash evenly in bottom of skillet; cook over low heat 40 minutes or until underside is brown and crusty. Do not stir, but occasionally lift edge of hash to check browning. Run spatula around edge of hash to loosen; fold one half onto other half; remove hash to serving platter.

Serve with chili sauce, piccalilli or horseradish. Makes four servings.—(Dot West recipe)

Penny Saver Is on Holiday

DEAR ABBY . . .

Fair's Fair

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last winter when my husband attended a convention out of town he got involved with a lady delegate in her hotel room. When Alfred came home he told me about it, which I appreciated, but instead of saying he was sorry and would never do it again, he said he'd do it again if he got the chance.

Fortunately Alfred doesn't get many opportunities to travel. He has always said that he would never have an affair with a local woman because this is a small town and he's afraid of gossip, and I believe him, but I know I'll worry the next time he leaves town.

I asked him what he would do if I got involved with another man he said he'd break my neck. Is this fair? He thinks he is being fair with me because he's telling me in advance. What should I do? — Alfred's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Tell him you are being fair with him, because you are telling him in advance that if he repeats his convention capers you will break his neck.

DEAR ABBY: Whoever said that hypnosis for the purpose of getting heavy smokers to quit doesn't work is all wrong!

My brother was a three-pack-a-day man, and after a series of sessions with a hypnotherapist he gave up cigarettes and hasn't touched one in over a year. In fact, he's the one who complains the loudest when his friends smoke during a poker game.

My Brother's Keeper.

DEAR KEEPER: Thank you for your letter, which was only one among hundreds in defense of hypnotherapy in this connection. However, I have been advised by several top-notch psychiatrists that most compulsive smokers (as well as compulsive eaters and drinkers) who have relied on hypnosis for a permanent cure are usually disappointed. Not all . . . but most!

DEAR ABBY: Today when I drove into a local shopping plaza I parked next to a car with two small children in it. They looked to be about two and four years old.

When I came back about an hour and a half later, they were still in there, crying their hearts out.

Just then the mother came along, and I said, "Your children have been crying for some time!"

With no concern, she said, "Yea, I know."

How can people be so cruel to small children ? Don't they know the dangers? — Mad In Bangor, Me.

DEAR MAD: They know, but they think all the horrible things that happen to children unattended in parked cars can never happen to their children. Only to somebody else's.

Student Centre Dispenses Birth Control Information

TORONTO (CP) — Diamonds are Forever — So Are Babies, reads the sign advertising a birth control clinic opened on the University of Toronto campus.

"It's not really a clinic at all," explains Dawn Aspinall, a 24-year-old graduate student.

"In fact, we are calling it a drop-in centre to make it seem more informal."

Mrs. Aspinall and a staff of 10 volunteers plan to operate the centre as a place where young men and woman can come for a cup of coffee and a chat.

"We are not planning to usurp the medical functions of the university health service or of any doctor," says Mrs. Aspinall.

"The drop-in centre is planned as a place people can come for a preliminary discussion before consulting a doctor."

Bonnie Ramsay, 18, a Humber College student and a volunteer, feels many women put off a visit to the doctor because they do no know what to say.

Spoken Words Powerful

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

The other morning, over a cup of coffee, we somehow got around to the power of the spoken word.

In the hours of our day, it was contended, we speak frequently. We greet friends and neighbors, visit over the telephone and pass a sentence or two (sometimes more) with many who come to our door.

Do we ever remember, one among us wondered, that the words we have said, whether trivial or profound, cannot be recalled.

Or that they may be passed from one to another and go on — and on — long after they are spoken.

It seemed an odd subject to explore at a coffee klatch. At the same time it was intriguing.

A moment before it came up we had been enjoying a rumor casually dropped among us with a shrug and a giggle.

★ ★ ★

It was an interesting tidbit. Funny too, in an off-beat sort of way. Because of its very absurdity, it was an even bet it could be repeated again and again.

The suggestion was made that if this did happen, words would be added. The rumor would grow.

Where might it end?

"If it gor far enough," our hostess said seriously, "it could cause trouble between two people. Maybe more."

We didn't make promises that we would not repeat that rumor. But I'm sure we came away, determined not to pass it on.

Afterward, I began to think of the many other ways that words are spoken. And of their far-reaching effect.

For instance, those words that are mouthed in anger. Perhaps to a child who has disobeyed. Or to a friend or a member of the family who has erred in some way.

Anger blots out reason. So it is easy in such instances for words to get wilder and wilder. There can be bitter reproof and just as bitter answers.

★ ★ ★

Until those concerned end up in complete misunderstanding and so wide apart in their thinking it is almost impossible to become reconciled.

How different if the angry words had never been said and softer ones of tolerance and understanding had taken their place.

There are blasphemous words, too. And horrible sounding oaths. Spoken today by those who seem to believe that by using them they are asserting their individuality.

There are words that create unrest. Words that incite others to sneer and jeer at law and order.

Words that pull down all the ideals that people have learned to accept as good and to elevate those beliefs that until recently would not have been tolerated in any well-balanced society.

On the other side of the coin it's well to remember that in the hours of our days there are millions of words spoken that are the exact antithesis of those others.

Words that personify compassion, good cheer, a concern for others and for the laws of our land.

★ ★ ★

They are spoken by a majority of people — young and old — as they go quietly on their way.

Words of this kind may seem small things to those who speak them. They may forget them almost at once. But they grow, as words do, and they travel many miles.

As they go they bring peace to the weary, make tired eyes smile, brighten the hours of the sick and what may be most important of all, they end up in a song.

Therefore, at our coffee klatches and in our every-day living perhaps we should stop more often and remind ourselves — "you said-it!"

Also to remember that words, once spoken are gone from our power. If they are evil their poison will spread. If they are good they will give strength to many. And perhaps indirectly to a troubled world.

Well-Heeled Hippies Only in Mountain Kingdom

By JAMES M. MARKHAM

KABUL (AP) — This Afghanistan city is the place to get away from it all, but only well-heeled hippies need apply.

A familiar sight around Kabul used to be the foreign long-hairs, begging from startled Afghans, conning students into buying them lunches at the Khyber Restaurant, sometimes embarrassing the Europeans and Americans who live here.

The government cracked down, specifying that you have to have at least $200 to enter the country. The number of hippies has fallen drastically.

But other aspects of the modern scene have penetrated Afghanistan, one of the last untamed frontiers in the world.

There is a student problem.

In the old days, the king, in order to secure the obedience of various khans—local tribal leaders—would insist that each khan send a son to be educated in Kabul.

It was widely believed—and often true—that the sons were sent to Kabul to guarantee their fathers' behavior.

Nobody would think of paying to send a son off to Kabul University, so education is free in Afghanistan. In fact, the government pays students' fares between Kabul and the provinces—even for vacations.

Still, the students riot, occupy school buildings, clash with police, protest against the system—which they claim doesn't provide them with jobs or move Afghanistan fast enough toward modernity.

Girls have joined the movement and last spring were clobbered along with their "brothers" when mounted police swept through Kabul University and chased students into the nearby hills.

Many students consider themselves Communists and glibly mouth the talk that the various centres of Marxist wisdom produce. Moscow has a slight edge over Peking.

Communists or not, these students are unswervingly patriotic. They called off their demonstrations for a week when United States State Secretary William P. Rogers and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin came to town in May. The students didn't want to embarrass the government in front of strangers.

Afghanistan has a remarkable king. He was a near-prisoner of relatives from 1933 when at 19 he took over from his murdered father.

But Mohammed Zahir Shah shook off their influence in 1963 and gave his country its first democratic constitution. He also banned all members of the vast royal family from politics.

Every day he sees ministers, parliamentarians and many other people in the royal palace. Lately he has been seeing student leaders, listening to their complaints.

"He is not only the king," one well-informed diplomat observed. "He is the most experienced politician in the country."

The king's democracy—especially the parliament—is an unruly forum that has brought out the latent divisions of Afghan society as much as it has developed the ideal of government by consent.

With the king's blessing, Communists, Socialists, landowners, Moslem priests do parliamentary battle in the Wolesi Jirgah, the lower house, and make life miserable for the prime minister and his cabinet.

RUGGED AND BARREN

This is a beautiful but often rugged and barren land, slightly smaller than Saskatchewan.

Crossing it on the modern Kabul-Kandahar-Herat highway, one sees camel caravans and groups of gypsies called Foochies are scattered along the sandy wastes.

Most traditional Afghans live in joint, or extended, families: All the married sons of one father live with their families and parents. The patriarch is the king of the house, giving his sons allowances out of their savings. His wife is the prime minister, keeping her daughters-in-law in a perpetual state of subjection.

The ordinary Afghan's diet is built around a bread-cake, which he eats twice a day mixed with roasted meat or vegetable seeds. Spiced rice —pilau—and kebabs are favorite dishes.

There are about 16,000,000 Afghans. They grow grain and cotton, and make unusual rugs. One of the main industries is breeding the sheep that produce karakul skins.

Seventy per cent of the North Americans living here get dysentery, a debilitating oriental malady that thrives in unsanitary places.

Yet most Americans living here love the country. The skiing is good. The trappings of civilization are here—the modern Kabul streets; some of the best highways in Asia.

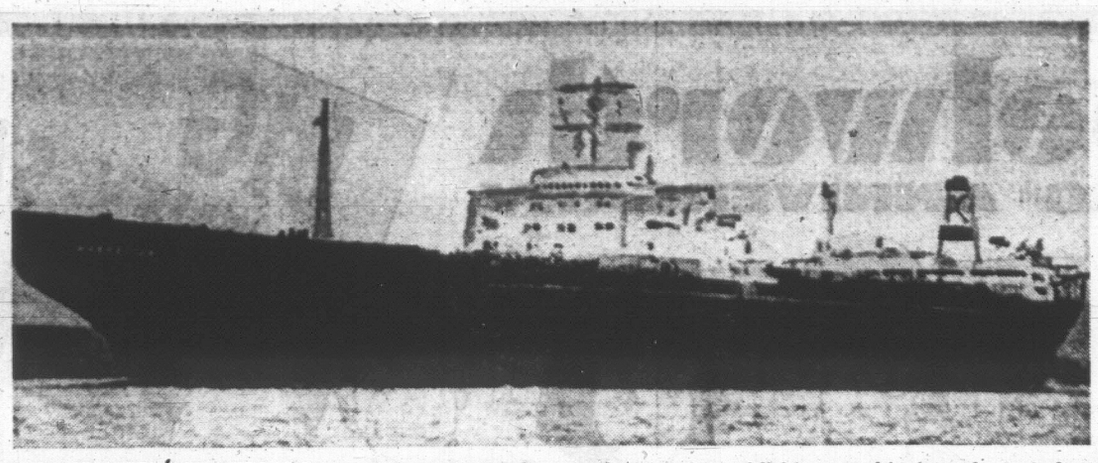
East Germans Jump Ship

OSLO (AP) — Three East German tourists leaped into the sea from an East German cruise ship as it passed through a narrow Norwegian strait Tuesday, police reported. They were picked up by Norwegian fishermen.

Norway's director of alien affairs said the defectors, a 31-year-old electrical engineer and a married couple, both 25, would be turned over to West Germany. He said all East Germans are considered citizens of West Germany.



SEA SHAKEDOWN TRIALS have been completed by the SS Manhattan, the largest ice-breaking tanker in the United States, which starts an attempt to navigate through the Northwest Passage Friday in hopes of establishing a shipping channel for Alaskan oil to United States east coast. Vessel is pictured near home port of Wilmington, Deleware. (CP Wirephoto.)

Arctic Oil Gamble On

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada could be the big winner in a multi-million-dollar American gamble to prove that huge oil tankers can navigate the Northwest Passage on a year-round basis.

Humble Oil and Refinery Co. of Houston is spending $30,000,000 to send the 150,000-ton Manhattan through the passage starting Friday in hopes Alaskan oil eventually can be moved cheaply by ship to the east coast of the United States.

The Manhattan, about 1,000 feet long, is the largest ship ever to attempt the ice-infested waters of the passage. If successful, it could be the forerunner of tankers twice as big transporting up to 30,000,000,000 barrels of crude oil from the potentially-rich northern slope of Alaska to the American market.

COST ADVANTAGE

"The tanker route would enable us to bring crude oil to the Atlantic seaboard at a substantial cost advantage over alternate methods of transportation," says Humble president Charles Jones.

One estimate is that oil moved by the tanker would cost 60 cents a barrel less than oil moved by pipeline.

Canada's contribution to the daring gamble is Arctic experience, the use of the icebreaker John A. Macdonald, aircraft fitted with special remote sensing equipment for mapping and assessing ice conditions in the passage, and the services of meteorological and telecommunications bases across the Arctic.

Because of its contributions, Canada will share in most of the scientific data gleaned from the historic venture.

BY SAME ROUTE

If the Manhattan successfully charts a tanker route, then it follows that any oil found in the Canadian Arctic can be transported by the same route. Ottawa officials have long maintained that Arctic oil must be low-cost oil to penetrate world markets. Thus, cheap transportation is a must.

A shipping route also would make feasible development of any large mineral discoveries such as the iron ore deposits discovered at Mary River on Baffin Island.

Said to be the richest find of iron ore in the world and among the largest, the Mary River mines have been left untapped because of the short shipping season in the Canadian North. Canadian officials also are sensitive about Canadian sovereignty over northern waters. Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons some time ago that while Canadian ownership over northern islands is not disputed, the same cannot be said about Arctic waterways.

For this reason, the external affairs department is sending an observer with the Macdonald.

Also aboard the icebreaker will be representatives of the department of northern development, energy, mines and resources, and defence.

The only Canadian aboard the Manhattan itself will be Capt. Tom Pullen, an Arctic expert from the transport department who has been designated the official Canadian representative.

Sailing plans of the Manhattan have been delayed because of minor troubles encountered during sea trials. Built in 1962, it was broken into five pieces earlier this year and rebuilt at shipyards to strengthen it for the icy trials ahead.

ON FIRST LEG

The Manhattan also was outfitted with a specially-designed icebreaking bow, giving it up to 50 per cent more power than conventional ice-breakers.

Capt. Pullen said in a recent interview that the Manhattan's late start probably means it will not encounter bad ice conditions on the first leg of its 4,500-mile trip through the passage.

"The first leg, which ends at Resolute on Cornwallis Island, should be a piece of cake except that the ship and crew will have to show a certain amount of humility for icebergs in Baffin Bay," he said.

West of Resolute, navigation becomes more difficult because landmarks are not as pronounced and there is less knowledge of water depths.

BEER CANS COVER CASKET of slain motorcycle club vice-president George Mayo following burial services in Lynnfield, Massachuetts, today. At least seven motorcycle clubs sent delegates to funeral of Mayo, a member of the Boston Huns Club, who was shot to death outside the club's headquarters Saturday. Cyclists bid farewell by showering the casket with beer and liquor and tossing empty containers into the grave. (AP Wirephoto.)

Exhumation Required For Kopechne—Lawyer

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — District Attorney Edmund Dinis says exhumation and an autopsy are needed for the inquest he will conduct into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, drowned last month when a car driven by Senator Edward M. Kennedy plunged off a Chappaquiddick Island bridge.

Dinis, whose district includes the island, applied to the Luzerne County, Pa., court of common pleas Tuesday for a court order for the exhumation and autopsy.

He sent his petition by registered mail, and asked the court to give him a hearing as soon as possible.

He said he wanted the autopsy report to present at the inquest, scheduled to open Sept. 3 at Edgartown.

Dinis told the Pennsylvania court his investigation is being conducted "in order that the circumstances of the death may be clearly established and the doubt and suspicion surrounding the death be resolved."

Miss Kopechne, 28, a former secretary in the office of the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy in Washington, was buried in her home town, Plymouth, Pa.

Dinis, meanwhile, was quoted in an article in the Brockton Enterprise as saying he ordered an autopsy July 20, the day after her body was recovered from the sunken car.

But, by that time, he said the body had been released by the associate medical examiner, Dr. Donald R. Mills of Edgartown.

Dr. Mills said later in a statement that he did not believe an autopsy was necessary and that he released the body after consulting with a representative of Dinis' office. Dinis denied this.

Boat Attacked

SEOUL (AP) — A North Korean spy boat attacked a South Korean fishing craft, killing two South Koreans and wounding three, South Korea's counterespionage command reported today. The command said the spy vessel was disguised as a fishing boat. The attack took place Tuesday near Wando Island, off the south coast.

Crime Victim Chance Doubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Each American's risk of becoming a victim of serious crime has nearly doubled since 1960, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover reported today.

Hoover listed the statistic, showing more than one out of every 50 Americans was victimized by crime last year, in his 1968 Uniform Crime Reports compiled from records of law enforcement agencies.

Hoover said almost 4,500,000 serious crimes were reported in 1968—a 17-per-cent increase over 1967.

All categories of crime shared in the rise, he said, and population growth alone cannot account for the 122-per-cent volume increase in the last eight years.

"Crime continues to outstrip population growth 11 to 1," he said.

Broken down by categories, the figures showed robberies increased 30 per cent from 1967 to 1968; forcible rapes 15 per cent; murder 13 per cent; aggravated assault 11 per cent; serious larcency 21 per cent; auto theft 19 per cent; and burglary 14 per cent.

Hoover said the increase in murders—from 12,090 in 1967 to 13,650 in 1968—reflected the "largest absolute rise over any prior year" in this decade.

As in the past, he noted, firearms were the predominant weapon and the South was the region where the most murders occurred—47 per cent of the national total.

Firearms were the means for committing 65 out of every 100 murders.

Bull Barely Recaptured

TORONTO (CP) — A 900-pound bull, an escapee from stockyards in west Toronto, led police on an eight-mile chase through heavy traffic Tuesday.

After the animal was lassoed and tied to a boxcar, one constable radioed to the station for a new pair of trousers.

Asked if the message was urgent, he replied: "I'm bare at the rear."

Rail Line Hit

EDMONTON (CP) — Heavy rains last week resulted in $500,000 damage when a 4,000-foot section of the Alberta Resources Railway roadbed was washed out, railway officials said Tuesday. A railway spokesman said tracks were left suspended up to 40 feet high in some places when cascading water undermined the roadbed.

Body Recovered

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lifeguard Tuesday night found the body of Henry Neville Walker, 32, of Vancouver, who drowned July 14 in a boating mishap in English Bay. The body of William Joseph Robert, 33, his companion, was recovered last week.

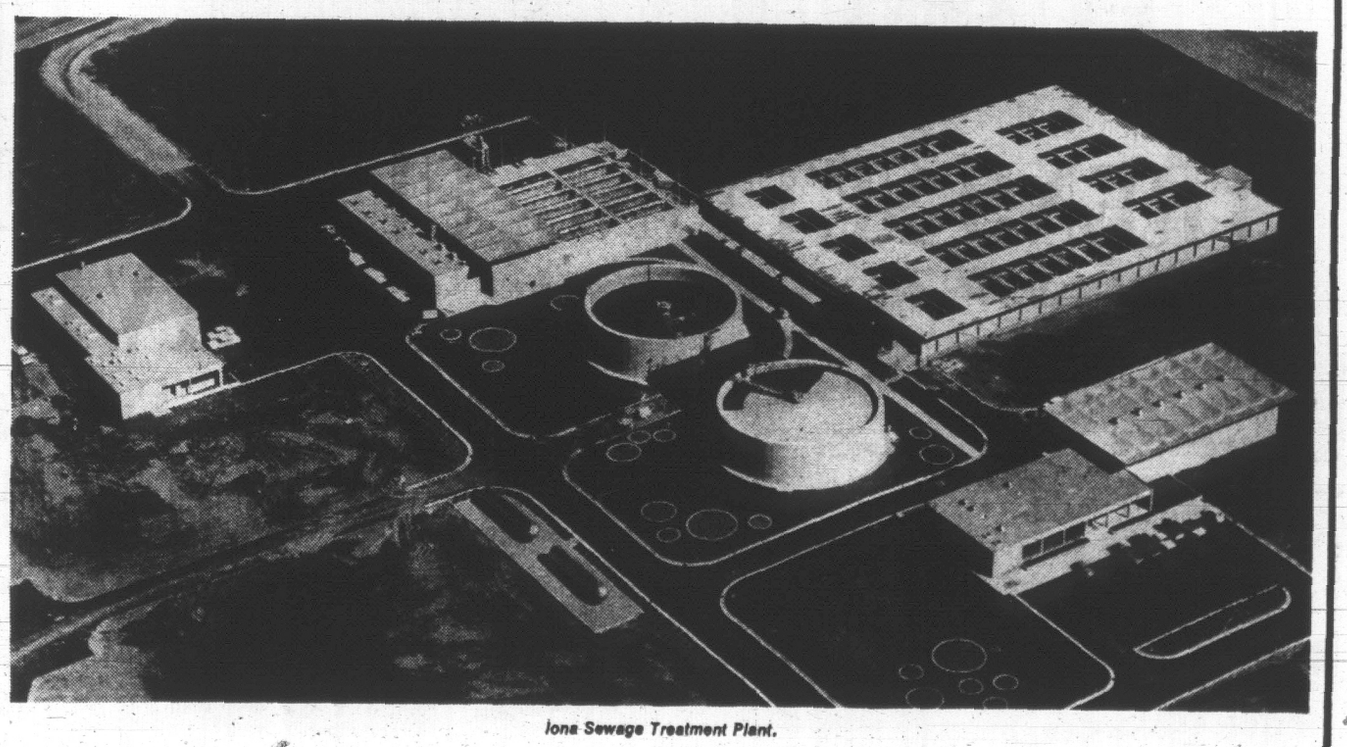
HEALTH BRANCH POLICY CONCERNING SEWAGE TREATMENT



Iona Sewage Treatment Plant.

In the interest of public health in British Columbia, all proposals for sewage treatment and disposal in this province require submission for approval under the "Health Act" to the Health Branch, Department of Health Services and Hospital Insurance.

These proposals can be generally approved:

- if sewage is to be directed to an existing approved treatment plant;
- if there is to be only a rearrangement of existing sewers but no increase in the size of sewer;
- if there is to be no additional sewage discharge.

These proposals can be conditionally approved:

- if the Council (owner, corporation, etc.) making the proposal provides a firm commitment that treatment facilties will be constructed by an acceptable date. A schedule of construction must be submitted and approved by the Division of Public Health Engineering and by the Pollution Control Board.

These proposals can not be approved:

- if there is to be additional sewage discharge without primary treatment.

These regulations are made to protect the health and safety of the people of British Columbia.

Raiders Offer Hope

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — Born out of despair, the Palestinian commando movement has given fresh hope to the hundreds of thousands of refugees huddled in camps or scattered across the Arab world.

Night after night the Fedayeen—Arabic for people who sacrifice themselves—slip across the River Jordan in small groups to attack an Israeli post, ambush a convoy or blow up a pipeline.

Their losses are heavy. Many of the Fedayeen in their leopard-spotted camouflage uniforms end in a grave or a prison on the Israeli-held bank. But their exploits have sent Palestinian morale soaring and restored a sense of self-respect to the exiles.

In two wars with Israel in 1948 and 1956, the Palestinians relied on their Arab brothers to uphold their cause by force of arms.

Instead, they saw disunited Arab armies defeated by Israeli troops enjoying the advantages of central command and fighting in the knowledge that only victory could ensure their survival.

MORALE WAS HURT

The debacle of June, 1967, when Israeli troops overran border areas in Egypt, Jordan and Syria to treble the territory under their control, finally shattered Palestinian faith in the ability—or indeed the will—of the Arab states to restore their homeland.

Fuelled by despair and the belief that in the last analysis they could rely only on their own resources, the Palestinian commando movement sprang into being.

The Fedayeen have in the last two years struck with increasing ferocity into Israel itself and in the occupied territories.

Although their raids have brought down upon themselves and their host countries sharp Israeli retaliation, they have done more than anything else in 20 years to restore Palestinian morale, to persuade the refugees in their arid and dusty camps that Zionism is not invincible.

Recent guerrilla successes have also prompted a belated move to restore unity in the commando cause by bringing more and more of the Fedayeen groups under the umbrella of the Palestinian armed struggle command.

NO MAJOR THREAT

The commandos are considered a major nuisance to Israel—not a threat to their military supremacy, but a constant irritant. Their border raids keep Israeli forces extended and their bomb attacks in Israeli towns sap morale and damage international confidence in the Jewish state.

Such countries as Jordan, Lebanon and Syria are more and more reluctant to risk Israeli retaliation by allowing their territory to be used as a jumping-off point for commando raids. So it is difficult to see how the guerrillas can by themselves hope to bring Israel to its knees.

Their aim is to bring the fighting to the stage where it will develop into a fourth full-scale Arab-Israeli war—a prospect seen by the refugees as the only solution to their plight.

Youth Band Draws Praise From Critic

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The National Youth Orchestra, performing without rehearsal and less than two hours after stepping from a plane Monday night, drew praise from critic Averill Baker in The Telegram after the first of two performances here.

"In reviewing a concert by this superb young orchestra, the biggest difficulty is reminding oneself that these are just a group of young musicians who got together and worked hard for the summer . . . not, strictly speaking, a professional orchestra . . ."

She said she hoped the application of a professional yardstick, "will be taken as a measure of the enormous esteem and awe in which I and surely anyone who has heard this orchestra under Conductor Victor Feldbrill hold hem."

Feldbrill, at the end of the performance by the 108-piece orchestra, said its members had little sleep in the preceding 34 hours but congratulated them on a "magnificent" performance.

Bad weather forced rescheduling of airplane connections for the orchestra between Charlottetown and St. John's. They did not arrive until about 6:50 p.m. for a concert which began at 8:30.

The orchestra leaves today for Ottawa and a performance at the National Arts Centre later this week.

SHE HATES GRIND

Biggest Wish to Retire

TORONTO (CP) — Yvonne de Carlo, like most people, would lead a different life if she had the money.

The actress said in an interview Tuesday if she had three wishes, she would like to take a holiday in Hawaii with her older son, make a movie "with integrity"—one she could control—and inherit enough money so she would never have to work again.

The Vancouver-born actress is here until Saturday, playing the lead female role in the comedy Cactus Flower at the Royal Alexandra Theatre.

Now, in her late 40s, she finds the work a grind.

What she would like to do now is buy a restaurant she likes in the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

"I could be the hostess and maybe sing a couple of songs a night. That would be terrific."

On tour with her is her younger son, Michael, 11. The older son, 13-year-old Bruce, is on his way to visit relatives in Rome.

Married to former Hollywood stunt man, Bob Morgan, Miss de Carlo, in her first movie success Salome Where She Danced, was billed as the most beautiful girl in the world.

She acted in a number of sexy-girl roles, then played Moses' wife in The Ten Commandments and the role of Mary Magdalene in the movie of the same name.

Since then she arranged a night club act that started in Ottawa and went to Las Vegas.

"It cost $20,000 to start that—that's a lot of money. I got tired of it. I get tired of things easily."

She says people today don't believe the sort of public relations buildup that gave her the title "the most beutiful girl in the world." They want realism, she says.

"They say, 'This is the real me.' Well I could go around in dirty slacks and have my hair all messy too. But who cares about the real me?"

Retrieval Project

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The commander of the Apollo 12 moon mission says the crew will try to retrieve pieces of the Surveyor III robot spacecraft which landed on the moon in May, 1967. Charles Conrad told reporters Tuesday that he and astronaut Alan Bean will attempt to bring back the pieces to give scientists a chance to study material which has been on the moon's surface for more than two years. Surveyor III was the first probe to dig into the moon's crust.

50 MILES OF TAPE FOR MOON MEN

CHICAGO (AP) — City officials estimate more than 50 miles of ticker tape will tumble from office windows during the parade today honoring the men who landed on the moon.

Police officials said they expect the motorcade to have the largest turnout of spectators since Queen Elizabeth came to Chicago in 1959. Estimates on the number of spectators then ranged up to 2,000,000.

Help, Help, The Globolinks A Way-Out, Smash Opera

By PAUL HUME

SANTA FE, N.M. (WP) — Between Gian Carlo Menotti at the very peak of his vivid imagination and the superlative staging of the Santa Fe Opera, the American premiere of Menotti's newest opera, Help, Help, the Globolinks, is a smash hit of unqualified proportions.

Into its single act, Menotti has poured all his love of children and of music. And he has done it in a style wholly fun, with brilliant forays against those who rank science high above the art of music and by superb use of electronic music in combination with his own finest inspirations in solo and ensemble writing.

ALLERGIC TO MUSIC

Globolinks are dangerous creatures from outer space. Their invasion of earth is boomed out at the beginning of the new opera, which had its world premiere last December in Hamburg, Germany. No known weapons are effective against the strange visitors, but they are strongly allergic to music. Any human being touched by a Globolink immediately loses his powers of speech, and within 24 hours, becomes a Globolink himself.

The opera is a melodramatic account of how the children and faculty of St. Paul's School meet and overcome the invaders, though not without some losses.

MORE FRIGHTENING

Santa Fe's opera house, open at the top, sides, and even the back of its handsome stage, is uniquely equipped to present Menotti's marvelous fantasy, and the composer's own stage direction took advantage of every possibility. As the announcement of the Globolink invasion was heard, fireworks rocketed through the air surrounding the theatre while strobe lights flared across the stage.

Suddenly, with all the lighting flashes, weird creatures began to appear, some leaping, while others moved awkwardly around, all the more frightening because of their unearthly appearance.

Much of Menotti's admiration for the choreography of Alwin Nikolais underlies all of his new opera, and it was Nikolais who designed the costumes for the creatures from outer space. He was originally intended to do the choreography as well, but for some undisclosed reason, and even though he and Menotti worked closely together on the opera, the ultimate dance movements of the Globolinks were the excellent work of Wilia Kim, who also did the costuming of the human members of the cast.

The opera's action centres around a group of children returning to school after a spring vacation. Their bus is mysteriously halted in a forest, where they are promptly menaced by the Globolinks. When the sound of the bus horn obviously slows down the unwelcome visitors, the bus driver asks Emily, the only one on the bus who has brought her instrument with her, to play her way through the Globolinks in search of help from the school's faculty. Emily timidly sets off.

NOTHING BUT 'LA'

The faculty, meantime, is finding out, in its own way about the invasion. The school's headmaster, falling asleep in his office, is touched by one of them, and for the rest of the opera, John Reardon, one of the finest singers in the country, is reduced to singing nothing but La.

However, under the inspired guidance of Mme. Euterpova, the school's music teacher, the faculty is marshaled into a marching band — they suddenly take a startling resemblance to the famous faculty of St. Trinian's — and the Globolinks' ultimate defeat is assured.

Menotti, as his own stage director, has loaded his latest brainchild with all kinds of wizardy. His score includes the most brilliant use of electronic music I have yet heard in any score. When audiences hear this opera, they will realize how magnificently electronic music can take its place in the developing history of the art.

NEAR TRAGEDY

Along with this latest music innovation, Menotti has made touching and hauntingly beautiful use of a single soprano voice in combination with a violin. In Judith Blegen, Menotti has found a remarkable, if not unique, artist. Not since the days of Marcella Sembrich at the Metropolitan a half century ago has a prima donna both sung and played the violin in an operatic production.

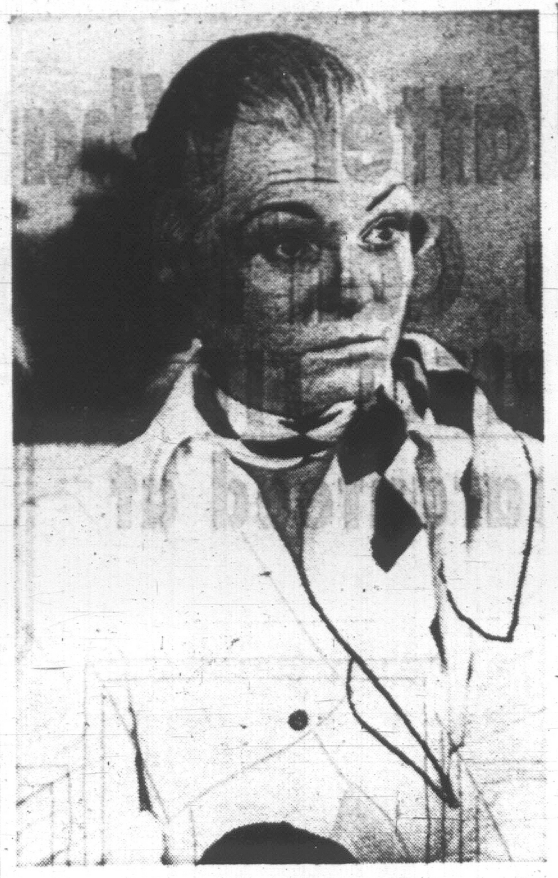
One of the loveliest lyrical passages in the opera is the melody with which Miss Blegen, as Emily, walks off stage, playing her violin as she goes to find help for the other children. And the children's chorus, sung by the Texas Boy Choir, which is in residence at Santa Fe this summer, is a fine touch.

The school faculty, headed by Reardon's marvelously comic Dr. Stone — a figure that later turns to something near tragedy as he turns into a Globolink — is a great collection of characters.

As Mme. Euterpova, Margaret Willauer has taken advantage of Menotti's offer, and, with him, creates one of the strongest comic figures on the opera stage.

William Workman, emerging in a number of major roles this summer in Santa Fe, is excellent as Tony, the bus driver.

In its total impression, Globolinks is so strong that members of the audience began to clap in time with its faculty march, and mature businessmen, caught up in its drama, were heard exclaiming, when Emily was driving back the advancing Globolinks with her violin, "Come on, give it to him. Atta girl, give 'em hell."



AN ANTI-SMOKING campaign has been undertaken by Peggy Talman, widow of television actor Bill Talman. Shown in an interview in Los Angeles, Mrs. Talman took up the campaign after her husband, who played the perennially losing attorney in Perry Mason, died of lung cancer last summer. (AP Wirephoto.)

Staff Outnumbers Audience At Chinese Anti-Soviet Film

LONDON (AP) — The latest arrival on London's movie circuit, a documentary of politics and violence, opened Monday night and theatre staff outnumbered the audience.

With smiles and informailty the Peoples Republic of China opened the doors of its legation to the press for a sneak preview of the hour-long Anti-China Atrocities of the New Tsars.

The synopsis said the theme was "hideous features of the Soviet revisionist renegade clique."

Between 20 and 30 guests were attended by scores of staff.

The movie depicted Soviet gunboats ramming Chinese fishing boats, seizing fishing nets, squirting water at Chinese fishermen and, it said, kidnapping some of them. There were shots said to portray Soviet troops sent "forcibly to occupy China's territory."

The critics did not predict a successful run.

"One could not help feeling that the film contained less violence than much television entertainment seen in British homes almost any night of the week," wrote one critic.

Big Blaze Scorches North Land

FORT ST. JOHN, B.C. (CP) — Forest firefighters hoped to bring under control today a fire 100 miles northeast of here, which doubled its size to 1,200 acres in high winds Tuesday.

Winds ranged from 30 to 50 m.p.h. and poor conditions grounded water bombers. Wind dropped late Tuesday as the fire burned through scrub spruce and pine after jumping fire guards.

Rain and lower temperatures reduced problems elsewhere in British Columbia. But 17 new fires were reported Tuesday, bringing the total burning to 220.

Feature Films Start Rolling in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — An infant Canadian feature film industry has at least seven movies either in production or in the planning stages.

Flick, a science fiction horror based on a modern Frankenstein, is currently being produce in Toronto. Letting Go, a movie from the Philip Roth novel, goes before the cameras in Kleinberg, 25 miles northwest of Toronto, next month.

The others:

—Larry Kent is getting ready to shoot Triple Bill, with Hayley Mills, in Montreal.

—In Vancouver, David Dotort, who produced Bonanza, has a film, tentatively called Impulse, which deals with two teen-agers attempting to break away from brutal parents. The script was written by Martin Lager, an Ontario writer.

—Michael Jacot Productions of Toronto has three movies set to roll: Eyes of the Night, set in Val D'Or, Que., and based on an Italian immigrant who tried to find his niche in Canadian society; The Last Act of Martin Weston, scheduled to be made in Prague Nov. 6 to Dec. 12 and centred around a chartered accountant with a split personality, and Journey Into Summer, telling the escape from an Iron Curtain country.

DECREASING FORCE

There are about 3,846,314 men employed in agriculture in the United States now. In 1940 that figure was 7,957,759.

'Complications' Delay Arms Talk

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Nixon administration's proposed date for starting American-Soviet arms limitation negotiations dissolved this week with Russian talk about "complications" rising, not diminishing.

It may be that the growing rumble on the Soviet side is only further justification for more temporary slippage in launching the missile discussions.

But the spreading talk of obstacles could also serve as groundwork to support prolonged, or even indefinite, delay.

★ ★ ★

Among the lengthening list of reasons now being cited by Soviet sources as imprecisely-defined factors which complicate opening the talks are these:

● Presidetn Nixon's Aug. 2-3 visit to Romania, which he hailed as the most "memorable" of all trips he has made to any foreign country.

● The Nixon administration's declared intention, as expressed by Secretary of State William P. Rogers last week, to "disregard Soviet nervousness" in "pursuit of contacts" with Communist China, just as "we intend to disregard Peking's denunciation of United States efforts to negotiate with the Soviet Union."

● West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger's visit to Washington last week. President Nixon reassured Kiesinger that the United States will continue to keep the interests of West Germany and other NATO allies very much in mind when it discusses nuclear missilry with the Soviet Union.

★ ★ ★

None of these matters is mentioned by Soviet sources as an absolute barrier to anything.

But they are ticked off as disquieting, or puzzling factors for the Soviet Union in gauging the broad intentions of Nixon administration policy.

Because of these "complications," the sources say, there can be added significance to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's visit to the next United Nations General Assembly session, which opens in New York on Sept. 16.

Gromyko is expected to meet several times with Secretary of State Rogers in New York, in what has become a standard pattern of U.S.-Soviet private talks on the edges of the UN.

The implication is that Gromyko will seek to take broad soundings of the Nixon administration's objectives, to help guide Soviet policy-makers in formulating their strategy for missile talks and for other purposes.

Whether the Soviet Union also will wait until that time to discuss the date for starting the missile talks is unclear. But that seems increasingly possible.

Soviet ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, whose return to Washington from Moscow continues to be delayed, is now said to be expected back late this month, but no date is being projected.

★ ★ ★

Dobrynin was under medical treatment for a month and a half but is now reported recovered from a stomach ailment.

It was two months ago, June 13, that Rogers told Dobrynin the United States was prepared to start the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) by the end of July; President Nixon said a first meeting was proposed between July 31 and Aug. 15.

State department press officer Carl Bartch said Tuesday, "There has been no response yet from the Soviet Union."

Some U.S. specialists believe that Soviet delay in agreeing to a date for the SALT talks is squarely due to the hardware and strategy of the nuclear issue itself, and not to vaguer diplomatic considerations.

Soviet sources themselves earlier this month said boastful American claims in the ABM debate about the superiority of U.S. missiles, were causing Soviet policy-makers to re-examine their position.

★ ★ ★

Since then, the re-examination may have been compounded by disclosure that the United States is working on even a more advanced Multiple Independently Targetable Re-entry vehicle (MIRV).

If the Soviet Union's hesitation in starting the talks was originally caused only by rival missile strategy, however, it is quite possible that opposing factions in the Soviet Union now have reached out for other issues.

Big Welcome For Moonmen In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The Apollo 11 moon voyagers came to a tumultuous hero's welcome in New York City today.

They touched down at the foot of Wall Street in lower Manhattan and began their triumphal motorcade through the city as ticker tape swirled in the air.

Tugboats dotted the East River as the astronauts arrived in Manhattan by helicopter after landing at Kennedy International Airport at 9:45 a.m., the start of a cross-country day of celebrations that would take them westward later to Chicago and Los Angeles.

This was no Sea of Tranquillity they came to on this beautiful, warm and sunny day—it was New York City at its fullest, its throngs hailing the moonmen whom earthbound Americans and others the world over soared with in spirit on one of the epic adventures of the ages.

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, 39; Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., 39, and Michael Collins, 38, were joined in their journey through the city and across the United States by their wives and children.

The astronauts climbed into a limousine with Mayor John V. Lindsay and Dr. Thomas Paine, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, at the Wall Street Heliport on the East River for the ride to city hall.

WAVE TO CROWD

The astronauts waved to onlookers. Behind them, fireboats sprayed fountains of water into the air. The tugboats sounded their horns in welcome.

Oddly, there was silence at first, as the moonmen stepped on to the pad from their U.S. Marine Corps helicopter. Then the horns and whistles began. The silence turned to lusty cheering as the motorcade began moving slowly through Wall Street amid the traditional ticker tape.

The arrival on lower Manhattan was the first chance for the public to see the astronauts. Members of the public had been asked not to go to the airport to see them and only 300 airport workers were on hand to cheer.

A torrent of ticker tape came from windows along the parade route, becoming a flood of paper on the ground. Police stood up to their ankles in ticker tape and confetti along Broadway.

Cheering, shouting, happy New Yorkers lined the streets six, seven, eight deep on both sides to see the men who went to the moon.

Thousands wearing Apollo 11 buttons, carrying cameras, waved American flags.

Rice and small dots of paper punchings floated down, and so did computer cards.

Policemen jogged alongside the motorcade as it pulled up to the city hall area, where excited children, the children of city officials, lined grey police barricades.

ONTO RED CARPET

Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins, sprinkled with confetti, stepped into city hall, lined with a red carpet, leaving behind them littered limousines.

"How was the trip to the moon?" shouted a spectator.

"It was wonderful," Armstrong said, pausing and waving. "Wonderful."

"That's certainly the last thing we're prepared for," Armstrong told a news conference in Houston Tuesday, when asked about the celebrations.

The coast-to-coast program of frenzied tribute will consume far less than the 21½ hours the Apollo 11 lunar module spent July 20-21 on the surface of the moon.

"We're behind before we begin," said New York's commissioner of public events, John Palmer, who arranged the tight, three-hour 15-minute welcome here.

From 250,000 miles in space last month, Collins radioed: "It'd be nice to have some company. Matter of fact, be nice to have a couple of hundred million Americans up here."

READY FOR CROWDS

Of course, there won't be that many on hand today. But police in New York and Chicago were prepared for crowds totalling well into the millions as the moonmen parade in blizzards of ticker tape up Broadway and along Chicago's glittering Michigan Avenue and State Street.

City hall receptions were on the schedule in both cities, plus a United Nations welcome in New York and a rally of 10,000 youths in Chicago's Grant Park.

Then it's on to Los Angeles and a reception and state dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel. President Nixon is the host, and in attendance will be most of the 50 state governors, plus hundreds of diplomats, space officials and fellow astronauts.

Millions who can't be there personally will watch the welcome on television, just as they watched enthralled as Armstrong and Aldrin walked the surface of the moon. All three major U.S. networks will cover the pageantry in the three cities.

As Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin receive the transcontinental homage of huge throngs, they will do so with the knowledge that the lunar landing which made them heroes came within seconds of being called off.

At the Houston news conference, attended by about 1,000 persons, Armstrong revealed that as the lunar module Eagle neared touchdown on the moon "we realized we had a possible abort situation to contend with."

LOW ON FUEL

In guiding the module away from a boulder-strewn crater, Armstrong said, precious fuel was consumed until there was only "15 or 20 seconds of fuel left." Had the fuel fallen below a prescribed limit, the moon landing would have been cancelled.

Other highlights of the news conference:

Aldrin: "We found our mobility on the surface better than we had anticipated. We found that a standard loping technique, one foot in front of the other, was the best way to get around. Kangaroo fashion, two feet at time, also worked but not as easily . . . It was one of my proudest moments to help plant the flag and to stand back and give it a quick salute."

Armstrong: "The primary difficulty on the moon was there was too little time to do the things we wanted to do . . . We had the problems of a five-year-old boy in a candy store. There were just too many things to do."

Collins (the man who orbited the moon in the command module while his companions landed): "The moon changes character as the angle of sunlight striking its surface changes. At very low sun angles, it has the harsh, forbidding characteristics which you see in a lot of photographs. On the other hand, when the sun is more closely overhead, a midday situation, the moon takes on more of a brown color, almost becomes a rosy-looking place, a fairly friendly place."

Today's orbit of acclaim for the moonmen was planned to begin with their arrival from Houston at 10 a.m. EDT at New York's Kennedy International Airport.

Policemen Need Safer Cars

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Delegates to the annual convention of the Police Association of Ontario decided Tuesday that Ontario policemen need safer cars.

The association passed a resolution asking the provincial government to set up minimum safety standards so municipalities would be forced to buy acceptable cars for police forces.

Several policemen criticized their departments for using cars "which would not pass a routine department of transport safety check."

Association president Syd Brown of Toronto told the 500 delegates American labor unions may try to bring Canadian policemen into their camp.

"This attempt to affiliate us with labor will happen here," he said. "We'll have to do everything we can to stop it."

Mr. Brown said policemen would not be able to enforce the law impartially, especially when strikes occur, if they are part of the labor movement.

Brown Derby Top Pigeon

Speediest bird, Brown Derby, owned by Doug Blackstock of Capital City Racing Pigeon Club, completed the 110 mile course from Hope in 2 hours, 33 minutes, and 18 seconds.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our many friends and relatives for the kindness and sympathy extended to us during our recent bereavement. Also for the beautiful floral offerings and cards. A special thanks to Rev. Pelletier and to the Pallbearers.
—Mrs. Linda Morino and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Morino.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Dorothy Robbins and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbours for their sympathy and floral offerings in their recent bereavement.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DRENNAN — In loving memory of my dear husband, John, who passed away August 13th, 1965.
—Ever remembered by his wife Laura and family.

HARRIS—In loving memory of our beloved husband, father, and grandfather, Ray, who passed away Aug. 13, 1968.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife Ethel, sons Jim and E. Ray; daughter Anne, daughter-in-law Flo, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

SMYTHE—In loving memory of my brother, Jack, who passed away Aug. 13, 1968.
"Always remembered."
—Jessie.

Give-Away Regulations No Problem

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of the National Association of Food Chains says he sees "no great problems" with new Federal Trade Commission regulations governing give-away games at grocery stores and gasoline stations.

"Remember," said Clarence Adamy, association president, "we testified during the FTC hearings that we were for full and open disclosure."

The FTC regulations, adopted Tuesday, are aimed at assuring each consumer a fair chance of winning in give-away games.

The rules, effective in 60 days, apply only to games of chance at supermarkets and service stations.

The regulations specifically call for retailers to disclose "clearly and conspicuously" the exact number of prizes in a contest, the odds against winning, the geographic area covered by a game, the total number of participating stores and the schedule termination date of the promotional program.

NUDE SCENE IN GRAVEYARD TO COURT

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — A complaint charging movie director Otto Preminger and actress Lisa Minelli with creating a nuisance by filming a nude scene in a local cemetery will be heard Aug. 25.

District Judge Denis F. Ryan set the day Monday.

The scene in question, in which Miss Minelli removes her clothes, was filmed in the Blue Hill Cemetery July 31 for the movie Tell Me You Love Me, Junie Moon.

The suit was filed by Mrs. Margaret Forganaro, whose husband is buried in the cemetery.

Students Wait For Talk Results

University student spokesmen said Tuesday they will not picket five city movie houses until they meet the district manager in Vancouver.

The students, angered at cancellation of student discounts on admission to restricted movies, postponed a planned demonstration ofter Odeon and Famous Player Theatre managements requested a meeting with the students Monday night.

Amrit Manak, University of Victoria student council treasurer, said that the three managers present at the meeting expressed sympathy with the student cause but indicated that they could do nothing without authorization from the district office in Vancouver.

SCOTTIE WILSON . . . time running out

'It's a Rotten World Filled With Torture'

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Life is beginning to close in on Scottie Wilson, the diminutive artist whose dream world of strange woodlands creatures was first inspired and developed when the wandering Scot operated junk shops and market stalls in Canada.

Walking is a chore; shopping for groceries a hardship and the occasional trip to the seashore an enormous undertaking. Mostly, Scottie likes to sit with slippers on and reflect on life.

At 79—or thereabouts—Britain's leading primitive artist still turns out a few of his two-dimensional dream pictures filled with little ducks, fish, trees and birds but it takes him almost a month to complete a single drawing.

Journalists still press him for interviews; television studios call on him for appearances and on occasion he is paraded in London's fashionable art galleries for what he calls "decoration" to help sell drawings that have passed into other hands and are no longer his.

Disgusting World

"It is the same all over the world, you understand," says the slum child of Glasgow with the bulbous nose and partly bald head as he rummages through life. "It is a rotten world filled with graft, torture, hate and jealousy.

"In my time we had fun, yes, but we didn't take pills. And all that blather on television; strip joints, hooligans, gangsters. It is a disgusting world, you understand. Britain talks of corruption in America. Well, it should clean its own doorstep.

"You hear thousands of people talking of their wisdom. They have as much wisdom as I have the gift to fly to the moon. Robbie Burns, Michelangelo, William Blake—they had real wisdom. I take off my hat to them. Even Charlie Chaplin.

"You take the last war and before the war—Communists and Fascists at each other's throats; professors who murdered children in gas ovens; violence; torture. There is no wisdom left in the world."

In One Room

Wilson, whose works fetch up to $400 in London galleries, lives mainly in his shabby bedroom, with a plain wooden table as his studio, in a run-down section of northwest London. The room has an unkempt look of an ancient bachelor who finds life tedious: a pair of socks on a rumpled cot; an electric toaster on the floor along with various packages; some china in a corner sink. A bare electric light hangs from a centre cord.

Scottie sits at one corner of the bed, smoking his favorite low-priced cigarettes and wearing a green sweater with a hole in one elbow. A gloomy frown that adds new lines to his wrinkled face gives way to a chuckle.

"I listened on the radio to the Americans landing on the moon. I'm glad they beat the Russians. Those Russians are doublecrossers anyway. They deceive people. They are scheming to swallow the world."

Scottie, who traded on street corners and soldiered half way round the world, complains of aches and pains and moans of the things he could have done in life if he hadn't been such "a wild one" as a youth. Then comes another chuckle, as though deep inside he knows he had his fun.

And while his reflections on life show signs of increasing gloom, his latest drawing—a light little design of tiny ducks, fish, birds and trees—conveys a feeling of simple, innocent joy.

"I call it springtime."

Before that it was butterflies—in all colors of the rainbow, done on hard paper in poster paints, watercolor washes and fountain pen and ink. Included were green and red swans with graceful plumage in the distinct Wilson style. They had replaced the "greedies"—the little weird monsters—which dominated his earlier work.

Came to Canada

"Scottie Wilson drawings always sell well," said a Circle Gallery spokesman. "While he may be considered as one of the most famous primitives in the world, his style is more romantic and decorative than primitive."

The gallery recently staged an exhibition of Scottie's butterflies.

Among friends, Scottie talks freely, but still seems to hold something back, probably adding to the mystery of his background. In 1949, for example, he placed his age at 67 which would make him 87 today. But in 1966 author Mervyn Levy, in a brief biography, said Wilson was born in Glasgow in 1890 and Wilson now agrees "that is about correct."

Scottie feels he didn't do too badly for "a boy who ran away from school." Levy suggests that poverty drove Scottie into Glasgow's streets where at the age of nine he helped an older brother sell patent medicines. At the age of 16 he was with the Scottish Rifles in India and South Africa where he purchased his discharge. He signed up again in 1914, to fight on the western front in Europe.

He went back to street trading after the war, got the travel itch and wandered into Canada and home again. He returned to Canada in the early 1930s, dealing in odds and ends from Toronto to Vancouver. It was during that period in a junk shop on Toronto's Yonge Street that Scottie's doodles grew into large drawings of green monsters, wobbly-turreted castles, birds singing in trees shaped like totem poles and rimmed by patterns of fish and swans.

His stock of sketches increased, dealers and critics started taking notice and Scottie Wilson, the primitive, was born.

"It is all writ out for you," he used to say. "It was all written down for me. It's something you can't explain."

Scottie still doesn't try to explain. Critics maintain his symbols are the impressions of a man yearning for the simple things he missed as a child; the pure abstract of things that have left a deep mark on him.

But perhaps, for Scottie, it is a form of escape from a world he hates; from a hateful, bitter world into the simplicity, the charm and the delights of the world of a child.

APPLE AD 'COERCION' CHARGED BY TEACHER

A Nanaimo teacher says B.C. Teachers' Federation ads which urge voters to support election candidates who use the federation's apple insignia in their personal ads is a form of coercion.

"By telling voters that the candidates who don't use the apple are either apathetic or antagonistic toward the BCTF proposals is unfair," said Mrs. Barbara O'Shaughnessy.

"After all, a candidate may be highly in favor of educational improvement policies without necessarily endorsing the specific BCTF proposals."

Ailing Rancher Sells Giant Cattle Spread

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) Rancher Jim Stewart of Kelowna Tuesday announced sale of the Chilco, British Columbia's third largest cattle spread, which covers more than 500,000 acres.

Purchaser is Newsom Cattle Ranch Ltd., headed by Dick Newsom, 37, Vancouver mining executive. Purchase price for the ranch, 60 miles west of here, was not disclosed.

Mr. Stewart, injured in a traffic accident two years ago, said he is not physically able to operate the spread. The ranch has had a string of owners since put together more than 80 years ago.

Included in the deal were 20,000 acres of deeded land, 500,000 acres of Crown land under lease or permit, and 2,000 head of cattle. The ranch once covered more than 1,000,000 acres.

Mr. Stewart came to Canada 11 years ago from New Mexico and has a purebred Hereford herd in the Okanagan area of B.C. He has undergone two neck operations since his auto accident.

"I just can't operate a ranch properly. I can't ride a horse or pickup like I should and I found you can't operate a ranch the size of the Chilco from your bed."

Mr. Newsom said he plans to increase the number of cattle to about 3,500.

Pay Increased

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver aldermen Tuesday voted themselves a $100-a-month pay increase, bringing pay to $6,000 a year. They voted 6 to 3 to give themselves their first pay increase since 1963 and made it retroactive to Aug. 1. Mayor Tom Campbell's salary stayed at $16,000.

Four-Year Contract For Kuhn?

SEATTLE (AP) — Major league baseball owners discussed the future of Bowie Kuhn behind closed doors at their annual summer session here Tuesday while the members of at least two delegations were preoccupied by troubles in the home camp.

Kuhn, the New York lawyer now temporary commissioner of baseball at a stipend of $100,000 a year, is expected to get a four-year contract at that sum, or more before the meeting ends tonight.

The distressing news that rookie outfielder Carlos May had been injured in a military training accident at Camp Pendleton, Calif., prompted Chicago White Sox vice-president Edwin Short to plan an early departure.

Short said he would fly south this morning to talk with Navy doctors and with May, who lost part of the thumb of his right hand when a round of ammunition fired in a mortar tube he was cleaning.

Trouble of a different sort brought a promise of prompt action from Calvin R. Griffith, president of the Minnesota Twins.

His team manager, Billy Martin, said Monday he had knocked out pitcher Dave Boswell in front of a Detroit bar last Wednesday after Boswell had knocked down outfielder Bob Allison.

"This has to be settled," said Griffith, "and if it wasn't for this Seattle meeting it would be settled now. I'm going back home Thursday. Friday I may fly to Washington and talk with them. I want to know everything that happened.

The National and American League owners met jointly Tuesday morning for informal discussions and broke into two groups for individual league sessions in the afternoon, also behind closed doors. Kuhn said both groups would talk over his situation as well as other matters.

The commissioner said division alignments of the two leagues seem satisfactory but there is some discontent over scheduling. Other matters to be discussed are details of the World Series playoffs and relations with the minor leagues.

Collins' Moustache Comes Off

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 11 pilot Michael Collins grew a trim moustache during man's first moon-landing voyage last month, but he shaved it off today.

With typically puckish humor, Collins refused to say why.

"I would like for anyone who is curious to make up his own favorite story from a shopping list including 1) my wife made me do it; 2) the children didn't like it; 3) it itched.

"The choice is yours," he said, "but as of this morning, the moustache is gone."

Collins cut off the fighter-pilot style mustache just before departing on a whirlwind transcontinental tour, including two parades and a presidential state dinner—all scheduled today.

After Apollo 11 ended, Collins told newsmen he had grown the moustache "as a souvenir of the mission."

10 Per Cent Cost Hike On Cheques

TORONTO (CP) — The service charge on cheques drawn on personal chequing accounts will go up by one cent Sept. 1, four Canadian banks announced today.

Details of the increase to 11 from 10 cents have already been sent to customers of the Royal Bank of Canada, the Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto Dominion Bank and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

The 10-cent service charge was set in June, 1957, a Royal Bank official said.

Third Strike By Gunpoint 'Borrower'

MONTREAL (CP) — A man who "borrows" at gunpoint to meet household expenses has struck again, for the third time this year.

Employees of a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch in the northwestern Cote des Neiges district told police they believe the bandit who relieved them of about $2,000 Tuesday is the same man who held up the branch twice before.

During the second holdup the man, who carried a .22-calibre revolver, left a note saying:

"The money comes in handy to pay utility bills and other household needs. My apartment in the area is also rather expensive."

Gas Probe Urges Government Ban On Consignments

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of Sudbury service station operators acted in concert to raise the retail price of gasoline in 1964, the restrictive trade practices commission said in a report released Tuesday.

But it said "special circumstances" were involved, including the system of control exercised by oil companies over their dealers, and recommended that there be no prosecution of the dealers under the Combines Investigation Act.

It recommended that the legislation be changed so that the government has a clear method of action against "consignment selling practices which are detrimental to the public interest." Consignment selling instituted by oil companies was a factor in the Sudbury situation.

The commission said a court order should be issued to prohibit the repitition or continuation of any action by the dealers to control the retail price of gasoline.

The commission opened an investigation of the Sudbury situation in November, 1964, after a group of retail gasoline dealers, members of Superior Auto Service Association, their trade association, increased prices and picketed some stations owned and operated by Imperial Oil Ltd.

HELD HEARINGS

Public hearings on the matter were held in Sudbury last Feb. 4, 5, 6 and 7.

The commission said the decision by association members to raise their retail prices "had its basis in the system of control exercised by petroleum companies over their franchised dealers, particularly the system of consignment selling."

Association members raised their prices two cents a gallon in October, 1964, and by an additional cent a gallon the following month.

At its hearings, the commission was told that Imperial Oil introduced consignment selling in the Sudbury area about 1960. Some other major oil companies also placed some or all dealers on this system.

Under it, the supplying oil company retained ownership of gasoline until it reached the tank of a customer's car. The service station operator received a commission for each gallon sold.

Various forms are used for a consignment agreement, the commission report said, "but an essential feature in all is the control of selling prices by the supplying petroleum company."

One form used by Imperial in the Sudbury area said dealers would be required to "sell each brand of such consigned gasoline at prices for such brand to be fixed and determined by Imperial from time to time."

The commission said the rate of return to the service station operator was set at 7½ cents a gallon when consignment was introduced in 1960. In 1962 and 1963, it fluctuated from a low of 5½ cents a gallon to a high of 6¾ cents.

OTHERS VARIED

Returns filed by other oil companies for 1964 showed Shell and British American dealers in the area were on a consignment commission rate of 7¼ cents a gallon and Texaco dealers at seven cents.

Gordon Ellwood Smith, president of Superior Auto Service, told the commission that dealers were losing money when the rate was 6½ to 7½ cents a gallon. They felt it was futile to ask the oil companies for an increase in the profit margin.

When Superior Auto members raised their prices, they also picketed two stations owned and operated by Imperial Oil where gasoline prices were a cent a gallon less than they had been at other company stations leased to private operators.

There was no lease at these "commission stations." Instead, the operator acted as the agent for Imperial Oil, handling consigned products and receiving a fixed scale of commissions for their sale.

In October, 1964, about 60 per cent of all service station dealers in the Sudbury area were under consignment contracts with their oil company suppliers.

Under the consignment system, the commission said in its conclusions, "the retail prices of gasoline were fixed and determined by the supplying company."

"The consignment dealer, although nominally an independent businessman, had no freedom to establish his own policy with respect to the sale of gasoline on the premises where he conducted his business."

HELD GREAT POWER

There were restrictive provisions in the franchise agreements these lessees held with the oil companies, the commission said, and the oil companies held "great power" over the dealer, including the right to "terminate service station leases on short notice."

The lessee dealer was left "in a position where he felt he had to follow, almost without exception, whatever directions were given by the petroleum company which supplied his station."

The commission also referred to the two "pace-setting" stations operated by Imperial.

While it was natural for a company to want these stations to turn a profit, it could have other motives.

"At the same time the company may be interested, as Imperial was in Sudbury, in influencing the price level of gasoline, particularly in Imperial Oil stations, and was not averse to narrowing the gross margins of its dealers in seeking that objective.

"Faced with competition from their supplying company, the dealers were apprehensive because they were fully aware that Imperial Oil with its great resources could exercise a degree of economic power which they had no means of meeting."

In these circumstances, the commission said, "consideration of prosecution of the parties against whom allegations have been made would be inappropriate in the circumstances revealed in this inquiry."

Twin Miracles

LARGS, Scotland (Reuters) —Two Scottish golfers scored a hole-in-one during a four-ball game Monday night. William McNeil and his brother-in-law, James Neison, shot aces on the 130-yard 17th at the Routenburn course.

HOME GARDEN

Picking Fruit at Proper Time

By HILDA BEASTALL

One great pleasure associated with the art of gardening is gathering its produce at the peak of attraction. This may be applied to either flowers or fruits and vegetables. From now until October questions will refer mainly to fruits of various kinds. When is the time to pick peaches? When do I pick tomatoes? And what size should squash reach?

Hilda

Each fruit (and here the word is used as referring to the result of pollination, not as vegetable opposed to fruit) has its own stage of perfection when its favor is said to be superb.

This stage usually is reached while the fruits are still attached to the parent plant, noticeably so in the case of cane and bush fruits like berries and currants.

Since the advent of commercial cold storage and home refrigeration, less people reach the homemaking age with even a nodding acquaintance with fruits ripened in sun while growing on the plant.

This is a pity for it leads to a lower standard of perfection in flavor.

Fruits gathered for marketing must be firm enough to be handled several times, or moved by mechanical means, without the outer coverings being bruised or broken. Therefore, the fruits must be gathered or picked before they are at flavor peak; in other words before they are ripe.

When we have fruits ripening in the garden, we can look at them each day and gather only those which have reached perfection. Their flavo rwhen eaten the same day will not resemble the same kinds picked before maturity and ripened later, but advantages in addition to flavor include no sugar needed with peaches and berries for instance, and no salt required for tomatoes.

An easy test for ripeness for tree fruits is to gently lift the fruit in the hand with an upward motion. In the case of peaches, apples and pears, the stem will separate from the twig when the fruit is ripened.

Tomatoes should be an even scarlet all over before picking, and the orange varieties should be a deep orange color. Pick only requirements for the moment; ripe fruits will keep for a day or two on the vine better than in a refrigerator.

In fact, no sun-ripened fruit is improved by chilling before eating, and here I know I'll be at odds with many opinions. But try sun-ripened fruits at air temperature just once for flavor.

About a dozen different kinds of squash are grown here. All can be used while young but their food value increases as they age. The flavor is delicious during the immature stage, and value can be added to the meal by using plenty of other nutrition.

Multiple Sclerosis Cure Hunt Goes On

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

A number of people have been writing me asking about multiple sclerosis. Their local doctors have told them that they don't know of anything to do. So far as I can learn, there is as yet no completely curative treatment for multiple sclerosis; it is a disease of nerves all over the body, and often attacks young adults, perhaps in the 20s or 30s.

For some reason that scientists do not completely understand, here and there the insulation goes off a nerve, much as it might go off an electric wire, and then for a while the nerve will not work well. This can cause a number of different kinds of symptoms; an early symptom may be a sudden loss of vision in one eye or a spell of bad vision; there may be odd feelings, numbness, and tinglings here and there. Later there may be weakness of the legs or arms, jerking, trembling, difficulty in walking and talking. Oftentimes certain of these symptoms will go away for a while; sometimes after a few weeks, the function comes back and an eye sees and a muscle works.

Naturally, when the local neurologist says he knows of no curative treatment for the disease (he does not even know its cause), the patient feels like traveling about the country, trying to find someone who had a cure and will promise to get him well. If I had the disease, I would not travel about looking for a cure, because the day a real cure is found for multiple sclerosis it will be written up in all the medical journals and in the newspapers and lay journals.

Today, there may be a few doctors who think they can cure the disease, but I would not go to them. Until recently, there was a doctor out west, who thought he could cure multiple sclerosis, or perhaps stop its progress. As I remember, he gave curare, which is a Brazilian arrow poison. I am sure he was cheered and heartened to carry on when a patient under his treatment had a remission (temporary let-up in the disease), but apparently he did not have a cure, because when he died, his "cure" died with him.

★ ★ ★

Many people write to ask me how long they can expect to live with M.S. It is difficult for anyone to answer that because so many people with M.S. live for more than 25 years and many are able to keep at work. There are cases on record in which the disease has been present for 40 to 60 years. I just heard from a woman whom I knew some 20 years ago, when she first got symptoms of multiple sclerosis. I hear now that she is taking care of her family, children who have been born to her, and she is not crippled.

Statistics show that a considerable percentage of people with M.S. are able to keep at work for 25 years or more after symptoms first appear. Some, of course, cannot keep at work that long.

Recently, I read that men have been traveling about the world trying to find out why M.S. atacks a higher percentage of the population in certain small parts of the world.

I read that some evidence suggests the M.S. is an autoimmune disease—in which one small part of the body becomes allergic to the rest of the body.

"A nice looking girl," commented Tom, handing back the photo. "How old is she now?"

"It's no great secret," replied Paul. "I'm just four times as old as Betty was seven years ago, and she's a third as old as I'll be in seven years' time."

How old was Paul?

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Brock, Tecumseh Captured Detroit

By BOB BOWMAN

Monday's story about Jay's Treaty, when Britain returned Detroit, Niagara and other important bases to the U.S., mentioned the defeat of the Indians who lived south of the Great Lakes. Many of them sought help from Canada, notably the great Shawnee, Chief Tecumseh, whose brother, The Prophet, was killed later in the battle of Tippecanoe. As American settlement swept westward the Indians were forced to give up their lands between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi.

When the War of 1812 began Tecumseh and a small band of followers crossed the Detroit River and joined the British garrison at Amherstburg after swearing allegiance to King George. General Isaac Brock arrived there from York on the night of August 13, 1812, and met Tecumseh who wore a tanned deerskin jacket and trousers, and leather moccasins. A small chain holding three small crowns hung from his nose.

Tecumseh was given the rank of Brigadier General in the British army and Brock conferred with him until four in the morning. U.S. General Hull, who had invaded Canada early in July had withdrawn to Detroit where he had 2,500 soldiers. Brock had only 700 soldiers, and about 600 Indians who had rallied around Tecumseh. Nevertheless, Brock decided to cross the river and attack Detroit, much to the delight of Tecumseh who shouted to his followers "Ho! This is a man".

Three days later Tecumseh crossed the river below Detroit, his braves paddling silently in the darkness, while Brock's force crossed at another point. The armed schooner Queen Charlotte began bombarding the fort and one of the first shells exploded near General Hull, killing three of his officers.

Meanwhile, the Indians began yelling their war cries from the surrounding woods while Tecumseh and Brock, reunited, secured horses and rode side by side in front of the advancing troops. This was too much for General Hull, who was accompanied by his daughter and grandchildren, and he surrendered Detroit.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Years ago, when a three no-trump contract was arrived at, and the defender sitting over the dummy-to-be said "double," it was nothing more than a suggestion to partner that the latter lead dummy's first-bid suit (assuming, of course, that neither of the defenders had bid).

This bit of theory has since changed. As it is used currently, this double commands partner to lead the first suit bid by dummy. The wisdom of this "command" versus "suggest" principle can be evidenced in the deal diagrammed below.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ J 8 5 4
♡ J 5
◇ K J 7 2

WEST
♠ 3 2
♡ K Q 10 9 4
◇ 9 6 5 3
♣ 10 4

EAST
♠ A K Q 10 7
♡ 7 3 2
◇ 8 4

SOUTH
♠ 9 6
♡ A 8 6
◇ A Q 10
♣ A K Q J 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Had East not doubled, West would automatically have opened the king of hearts, since he could not have been that clairvoyant to have known the spade set-up round the table. As is evident, had the heart king been led, declarer would have scampered home with 10 tricks.

But, with East doubling the final three no-trump contract, West dutifully opened the three of spades, and East quickly gathered in five spade tricks, to hand South a one-trick set.

For those readers who might look askance at North's one spade response, it should be pointed out, first, that if the sapde suit had not been concentrated in East's hand (resulting in East's doubling of the final contract), the response would undoubtedly have steered West away from leading a spade.

And secondly, North's response of one spade, rather than one diamond, was a "looking ahead" bid. North felt that if he responded with one diamond, and South happened to rebid one heart (in theory), North couldn't very well pass; since he would then leave South in the worst possible trump suit. And yet, if North bid again (over one heart), South would (or might) assume that North possessed more than the miserable six points that he actually had.

So North bid one spade, intending this to be his first and last voluntary bid, come what may.

Gravedigger Set to Stop PM's 'Treason'

PENZANCE, England (UPI) — A 27-year-old gravedigger said Tuesday he will sail for the Scilly Isles this week to arrest British Premier Harold Wilson on a charge of treason.

Warner Williams of Bebington, England, who spent two years studying laws dating back to the Magna Carta, said he would charge Wilson with violation of an ancient civil rights regulation.

●

Williams said that, in applying for British membership in the European Common Market, Wilson "conspired with foreign powers to place an authority — Brussels Council — above the sovereign."

This, according to the Treaty of Rome," "is treason," he said.

Williams vowed that if Wilson resisted arrest he would "use force." He said he would carry along a "private persons warrant" which he drafted himself and that he would row the prime minister back to Cornwall and march him to a police station.

●

One lawyer said there was nothing to stop Williams from trying but that "it is a case of how far he's likely to get before the magistrates."

The Home Office said it had never heard anything like it.

The Scilly Isles, where Wilson was staying, are off Britain's southwest coast.

Commuter Train Rammed

NEW YORK (AP) — An empty Long Island Rail Road train rammed into the rear of a crowded commuter train in an East River tunnel today, injuring about a dozen persons.

An LIRR spokesman said none was injured seriously.

The two eastbound trains, one a "deadhead," left Penn Station in Manhattan shortly after 8:30 a.m. The crash occurred about a half-hour later 1,200 feet west of the Long Island City, Queens, exit from the tunnel.

After the crash, a diesel locomotive pulled the passenger train into the Jamaica, Queens, yards and the injured were taken to hospital.

Bank for Films 'Hurting Cause'

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian film-maker Michael Jacot says the Canadian Film Development Corp., set up by the federal government as a congenial banker for the industry, is hurting the cause.

Jacot went into documentary film production in 1963 and has made films for the CBC and private industry. On Tuesday he announced plans for production of four feature films and described how he's getting more help from the Czechoslovakian film industry than the CFDC.

"I think the CFDC people have done a lot of harm to the Canadian film industry," Jacot said. "They really fooled us around. I spent a fortune preparing drafts for them but they still have no guidelines.

"They're feeling their way and when you submit something to them they return it and want it done another way.

"The next time, when you give them what was wanted . . . they turned around and ask for something else."

PROMISE TO HELP

Jacot said in an interview he had obtained a letter of commitment from the corporation to help finance a film Eyes of the Night about an Italian immigrant miner unable to fit in the society of Val d'Or, Que.

"But when the corporation's head, Michael Spencer, came to meet my private financial sponsors," Jacot explained, "he announced that the CFDC was withdrawing, though it would help make the 'more timely' Journey Into Night."

The latter film, to be shot next spring in Quebec City, concerns the escape of a refugee and his family from behind the Iron Curtain.

Jacot plans to shoot Eyes of the Night with a Czech film crew and to direct the crew in filming another feature The Draft Dodger, in Montreal. He will take the footage with him to Prague for editing on advanced equipment there and will also make the fourth film, The Last Act of Martin Weston, a psychological thriller.

Eyes of the Night will be ready for release late next January, Jacot hopes.

Meanwhile, he feels the CFDC "needs to get over its hangup" of defining what is a Canadian film.

GIVES HIS DEFINITION

"To me it is not a film about Toronto or Montreal, but about any subject at all, seen from the Canadian slant, the Canadian point of view.

"The problem is that the corporation was set up along lines copied from two British models for government support. But the British plans were tailored to rejuvenate a flagging film industry—one which already had studios and distribution outlets."

Jacot criticized several of the CFDC's choices for support. "Now it's compounding its errors by giving money to John Bassett's Agincourt Productions for Flick. There's no reason why millionaires shouldn't finance their own films."

Flick, a science fiction horror film based on a modern Frankenstein, is currently being filmed in Toronto.

Other Canadian features planned or in production include: Letting Go, an adaptation of Philip Roth's novel, to go before the cameras at Kleinburg, Ont., next month; Triple Bill, a film by Larry Kent to be shot in Montreal; a film by David Dodort of Vancouver who produced Bonanza, which deals with two teen-agers attempting to break-away from brutal parents and which is tentatively entitled Impulse.

$5,760,000 In Payments Authorized

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge Tuesday authorized payment of a total of $5,760,000 to holders of shares in two mutual funds which were part of the troubled Commonwealth group.

Mr. Justice Gordon Rae gave permission for A. D. Peter Stanley, receiver for Diversified Income shares A and B, to turn the money over to Commonwealth Trust for distribution.

Shareholders decided May 24 to terminate the funds. There are 4,130 shareholders and $7,400,000 is involved, of which $1,640,000 is held back pending completion of investigation.

Specialist's Touch For 'New-Old' Art

TORONTO (CP) — When an art student wants someone to cast a piece of sculpture, when a church needs a new decorative ceiling, when a woman wants a set of antique candlesticks cleaned, they call at the rear of 69 Pape Avenue in east-central Toronto, a modest-looking shop with a maze of workrooms all hung with displays of work going back three generations to the founder of Balmer and Co. Ltd.

There are companies which carry ornamental plaster work or sculptured wall plaques in their inventory, but Balmer deals exclusively in the trade.

A few weeks ago, says company president Wilf Balmer, the company saw a hole in the contemporary art market. The company hired new artists, one a Czech refugee, to work on abstract creative forms—a switch from the traditional line of Georgian and Adams designs the firm emphasizes.

RESTORED BALLROOM

During the last four years the firm has been doing well with a "new-old" art form: sand sculpture adapted from the ancient tile stampings of the Aztec and Yucatan Indians.

The huge chandelier in Toronto's King Edward Hotel lobby, the Bema screen work in Temple Sinai and the coats of arms in Ontario provincial courtrooms are all examples of Balmer's art through 60 years.

The coats of arms are made from gypsum super-strength cement, which is five times harder than plaster and rings like steel. They are embossed with pure gold leaf.

The pride and joy of the company is the entire main ballroom of St. Lawrence Hall for the Arts which the company workmen restored from old photographs, a sagging ceiling, drooping walls and two cardboard boxes of plaster chips saved by the city from the original hall.

Most of the company's work is done in hotels, apartment lobbies, banks, board offices, head offices of companies and public and institutional buildings.

BASEBALL COMMON

There are about 600 baseball clubs with about 100,000 players in Finland.

—CP Photo.

ORNAMENTAL PLASTER WORK is pointed out by Wilf Balmer, of Toronto, whose company, Balmer & Co., Ltd., specializes in works of this kind and sculptured wall plaques. This Mexican motif sand sculpture is one of many ornament originals for CBC television sets designed at Balmer before they are moulded in special light plastics for scene backdrops.

Change Now Needed In Way of Living

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Population experts theorize that man has lengthened his life span as much as he can be fighting contagious disease and will have to change his way of living to lengthen it anymore.

Their theory, set forth in a United Nations report, attempts to explain a recent rise in death rates in some countries.

They say the rates fell for 150 years mainly because improvements in living standards and simple health and medical measures brought "a decline in mortality from acute infectious diseases."

But they speculate that these methods only took advantage of "an innate resistance to infection" in mankind and now that resistance has been exploited to the limit.

"If we are to increase life expectancy," they say, "we may need to change our basic patterns of behavior."

Specially, they call for "introduction of some new factor or factors capable of preventing death from a quite different range of diseases."

MORE HEART DEATHS

They point out that more and more deaths are caused lately by heart and lung ailments, automobile accidents and suicide.

Some day, they hint, mass starvation may also be a major cause of death unless "population growth is not countered by either falling birth rates or an increasing food production or both."

The experts, with the United Nations and the UN World Health Organization, prepared the report for the Population Commission, to meet in Geneva on Nov. 3-14.

China, Russia In Major Clash

Both Charge 'Invasion'

TOKYO (CP)—Fighting broke out between Soviet and Chinese troops today on the frontier of Sinkiang province, home of Peking's nuclear arsenal and missle-testing grounds.

China charged that several hundred Soviet troops under cover of two helicopters invaded Sinkiang and there were many Chinese casualties.

The Soviet government a little later charged that Chinese troops penetrated Russian territory and there were casualties. The nationality of these was not stated.

Each side said they had launched strong protests against the latest incident.

The official Tass news agency said the Soviet government reiterated earlier warnings that "any encroachments onto Soviet territory will meet with a decisive rebuff."

Tass said the fighting today was in the Semipalatinsk area of Kazakhstan across from China's Sinkiang province, the same area as a clash during the World Communist Conference in Moscow in June.

Tass said two Chinese officers were captured on Soviet territory. It said there were some deaths and injuries in the fighting but gave no details.

'Chinese Ignored Warning Signs'

Tass quoted the Soviet protest note, delivered to the Chinese embassy in Moscow, as saying Chinese troops ignored warning signals and demands that they leave Soviet territory.

Instead, they opened fire on Soviet border troops with automatic weapons and tried to bring up reinforcements of two further groups numbering 60 to 70 men each, it said.

"As a result of measures taken by the Soviet border troops, the violators were thrown back beyond the Soviet borders," it said.

China claimed hundreds of Soviet troops backed by tanks, armored cars and helicopters invaded Chinese territory, killing and injuring many Chinese troops.

A Chinese-language broadcast by Radio Peking said more than 10 tanks and armored cars were among the forces that penetrated more than a mile into Sinkiang, site of China's nuclear testing grounds.

Chinese border troops went into action and in the following skirmish several Chinese border patrolmen were killed or injured and several Chinese troops were encircled, the broadcast claimed.

Then the Russians sent in more troops, the broadcast continued, and further clashes were expected.

Troop Withdrawal Demanded

The fighting centred in the Tiehliekti area of Yumin County on Sinkiang's northwestern border with the Soviet Union, Radio Peking said.

The foreign ministry in Peking lodged a protest with the Soviet embassy, denouncing the "intrusion" and demanding the immediate withdrawal of the Russian troops. Otherwise the Soviet union must face the consequences of the action, the note said.

Sinkiang province, in the northwest corner of China, long has been a trouble spot. The Russians have accused the Chinese of initiating border incidents there. The Chinese have levelled similar charges and accused the Russians of kidnapping residents in the province.

Singkiang long has been of interest to the Russians. They practically took over the province to exploit its vast uranium resources early in the days of Communist rule in China but later relinquished exploration rights there.

Sinkiang is the site of Lop Nor, the Chinese nuclear testing ground and missile centre.

The last known clash between the two Communist giants along the Sinkiang border occurred on June 11 in the Yumin area.

In lodging the protest note, the Chinese foreign ministry claimed the Soviet Union was trying "to create a new bloody incident."

It demanded the Russians "immediately cease firing and withdraw" all troops back across the border.

Peking's official New China news agency said the "situation is developing."

It accused the Russians of

POLITICAL RIDDLE

The provincial constituency of Alberni is a major political riddle in a province of many political riddles.

It stretches from the summery beaches of Qualicum, west through Port Alberni with its heavy industry and fifth highest average wage in Canada, then north along the roadless, mountainous coast to the fishing villages on Nootka and Kyuquot Sounds.

How Alberni will go Aug. 27 is a tough bet. Times staffer Jim Hume went to the riding to see what's going on. His report is on page 14.

Nominations for the election close today. A list of candidates for the 55 legislative seats is on page 20.

Writer Says Kennedy Lied About Accident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy did not make the impulsive 150-yard swim between two islands off the Massachusetts coast the night his car plunged into the water killing Mary Jo Kopechne, columnist Jack Anderson said today.

Anderson said he learned that Kennedy made the trip from Chappaquiddick Island to Martha's Vineyard in a boat along with two friends.

In his nationally televised remarks after the accident, Kennedy said he tried to rescue Miss Kopechne along with help from his cousin Joe Gargan and a friend, Paul Markham. He said the three went to the ferry for Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard but it was closed for the night.

"I suddenly jumped into the water and impulsively swam across, nearly drowning once in the effort, returned to my hotel around 2 a.m. and collapsed in my room," Kennedy said.

But Anderson, who writes jointly with Drew Pearson, said "Gargan and Markham rustled up a boat and took Kennedy to adjoining Martha's Vineyard. The senator did not suddenly jump into the water and impulsively swim the treacherous 150-yard channel as he later claimed."

Anderson said Kennedy had asked Gargan to take the blame for the accident — to tell police that he, not Kennedy, was driving the car. The late-night trip across to the other island, Anderson said, was designed to

N. IRELAND RIOTS CONTINUE

Dublin Gov't Seeks UN Force

DUBLIN (Reuters) — The government of the Irish Republic has asked Britain to apply immediately for urgent dispatch of a United Nations peacekeeping force to neighboring Northern Ireland.

Premier Jack Lynch, leader of the country which split with Britain in 1920 while Northern Ireland remained part of the United Kingdom, announced the request in a radio and television broadcast.

Lynch said he had asked the Irish Army to establish field hospitals along the border between the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland to deal with casualties from violence in the North.

LONDONDERRY (C P) — Rioters fought police again today at the barricades in the embattled Bogside district of Londonderry after Northern Ireland's worst bout of violence since the Great Depression in the 1930s left more than 300 persons injured Tuesday.

Another 140 were injured overnight.

More than 300 police broke through the barricades of Bogside in an effort to quell rioting which raged all night.

The police, armed with clubs and tear gas, ducked stones and gasoline bombs as they tried to clear the Bogside area.

The battleground was a desolate scene, with overturned cars, burning wooden barricades and thousands of paving stones and broken bottles littering the street.

Weary police returned to the battle after a night in which they were the main casualties —90 of them were injured. One was turned into a human torch when hit in the back by a gasoline bomb.

A youth was shot in the shoulder in unexplained circumstances.

Police used tear gas to disperse rioters Tuesday night.

They used it again today to break into Bogside.

The district is the flashpoint of Protestant-Roman Catholic violence which has convulsed Londonderry and other cities in Northern Ireland for nearly a year.

For a short while today it looked as if the fighting was at last over, after the government banned all marches and meetings and moved British troops up to the outskirts of Londonderry.

But this turned out to be only a breakfast-time lull.

Rioters came back to the Bogside's barricaded border in greater strength to stop police from maching in.

A hail of rocks greeted the police and they responded by using the tear gas.

At the height of the rioting some 300 British infantrymen from the Prince of Wales' Own Regiment were brought up to a naval base outside the city. An official termed it "a precautionary measure."

But Irish authorities did not call them in, despite the fierce street fighting.

The government is likely to come under strong attack for not banning the Tuesday's big Protestant parade which bore every sign of provoking trouble.

Belatedly this morning the government decreed a ban on all public meetings and marches throughout the six provinces—except those of the Salvation Army. The ban will be reviewed at the end of August.

At noon today the fighting continued in the narrow, rubble-strewn streets of the Bogside slums. Police penetrated further into the Catholic district than at any time in this or previous riots.

KIDS CARRY BOMBS

Dozens of youngsters, gasoline bombs at the ready, lined the roof of a big new apartment block ready to attack if the police should advance. The police were lined up across the street just out of rock-throwing range.

The Bogside mobs now have a virtually unlimited supply of gasoline taken from a filling

Attacks Cong 'Answer' To South Peace Proposal

SAIGON (Reuters) — The National Liberation Front announced today the Viet Cong will continue fighting in South Vietnam until it has forced all foreign troops to withdraw from the country.

The NLF's secret radio station—voice of the Viet Cong-sponsored provisional revolutionary government—made the announcement a day after a countrywide series of attacks was launched by the Viet Cong, with support from five North Vietnamese regular divisions.

The attacks dropped off sharply today, with only about 20 shellings reported compared with 150 shellings and ground assaults against southern allied bases and towns Tuesday.

The Associated Press reported that U.S. and South Vietnamese forces claimed they killed 1,450 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops Tuesday.

197 KILLED

About 90 Americans and 107 government troops were reported killed Tuesday, and 500 Americans and 371 South Vietnamese were wounded. In recent weeks the daily average had fallen as low as 15 to 20 Americans killed in combat.

The NLF radio earlier said the attacks were ordered by North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh to try to gain a decisive victory to mark two important North Vietnamese anniversaries: The revolt against the French on Aug. 18, 1945, and Ho's proclamation of independence 15 days later.

Observers here saw the response from the Viet Cong as a final rejection of President Nguyen Van Thieu's latest peace offer last month of challenging the NLF in elections here, and as proof that the Communists are prepared to continue the military struggle.

The fighting came after a 7½-week lull in military activity, and had been predicted by military observers and high officials.

But the U.S. command was reluctant to term the series of attacks an offensive, preferring to class it as a high point.

The withdrawal of 25,000 U.S. troops announced by President Nixon continued. The U.S. command announced that 3,600 more men were leaving this week.

This will bring the total withdrawn to 17,200, leaving 7,800 to be pulled out by the end of the month.

Eligible Voters Increase By 32 Per Cent

The number of registered voters in British Columbia has soared by 32 per cent to 1,151,806 since the 1966 provincial election.

A province-wide enumeration completed yesterday by provincial authorities has produced 277,879 more eligible voters for the Aug. 27 provincial election.

Of the 873,927 eligible to vote in the 1966 election, 596,716 or 68.28 per cent of the electorate actually cast ballots.

The large increase in registered voter numbers is attributed both to the enumeration—first since 1960 which went out and found residents who hadn't bothered to register—and also to the rapid population growth of the past three years.

Military Cuts Announced

OTTAWA CP) — The radar and communications training centre at Clinton, Ont., and logistic depots at Coburg and London, will be "phased out" over the next two years, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today. A depot at Montreal will close within a year and activities at St. Hubert, Que., Military Base, will be curtailed in the changes which will affect about 2,600 military and civilian personnel.

Three Rivers Chief Admits He's in Dark

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Police Chief Amedee Delage told a provincial inquiry commission Tuesday he doesn't know what is going on in the city police force.

His only contacts with his deputy, Capt. Georges Gagnon, are made by telephone, he testified.

The commission, headed by Judge Roger Gosselin, is investigating the police department in Trois-Rivieres, Quebec's fifth largest city. Chief Delage was the first witness called.

The inquiry was ordered by the provincial government after Alderman Gaston Vallieres declared at a city council meeting in March that prostitution was flourishing here with the support of certain members of the police force.

Chief Delage also testified that it was unusual for anybody in the 150-man force to work during the weekend.

"Your detective squad has nine men," Judge Gosselin remarked. "Is it efficient?"

"I don't know and I haven't tried to find out," the police chief replied.

Answering another question by the judge, Chief Delage said Sgt. Paul Dallaire is the head of the morality squad, but he is not sure how long he has held this post.

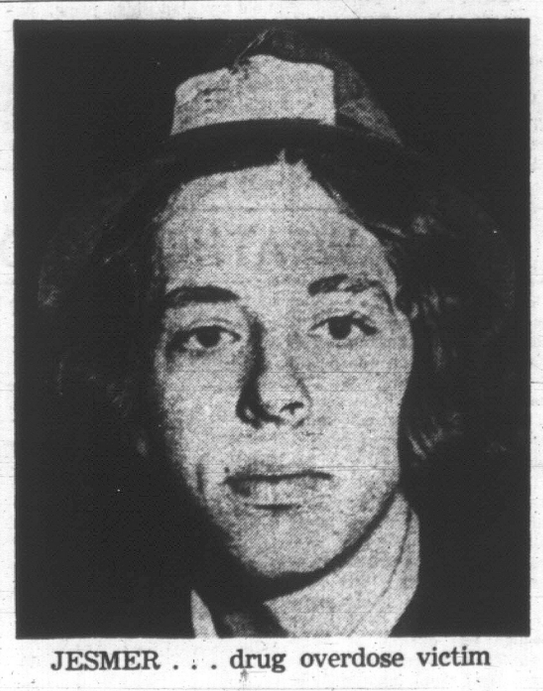
MET HIM ONCE

"I only met him on one occasion, following a complaint, when he was responsible for checking on women of easy virtue. Our interview lasted for three or four minutes. I asked him to change his methods of dealing with prostitutes."

"Did he change?" the judge asked.

"I haven't made sure of this," the chief replied. "It didn't occur to me to do so."

The inquiry then continued behind closed doors.



JESMER . . . drug overdose victim

Second Youth Accuses Trudeau

VANCOUVER (CP) — A second youth said today that he was punched by Prime Minister Trudeau during a demonstration here last week.

Roderick Daniel Young, 19, of Burnaby said he can't follow the action of Richard Bruce Jesmer of Niagra Falls, Ont., in filing an official complaint against the prime minister because he doesn't know anyone who witnessed the incident.

"If I could find anyone now I'd definitely go in and swear out an information," Young said in an interview. "If he gets away with it once there's no reason why he won't try it again."

Jesmer, a 17-year-old laborer who has been spending the summer in Vancouver, was admitted to the emergency ward of Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday for observation after telling Vancouver Sun reporter Simma Holt that he had taken "about 20 pep pills or get-up pills." He was discharged during the night.

A justice of the peace is to rule Friday on whether prosecution should proceed on Jesmer's complaint accusing Mr. Trudeau of common assault. The alleged incident occurred during the Friday night demonstration by about 300 persons as the prime minister was making his way to the Seaforth Armory in downtown Vancouver to attend a $50-a-plate Liberal fund raising dinner.

Romania Stresses Own Path

BUCHAREST (Reuters) — Romania at its just-concluded Communist party congress reasserted its aim to develop as an independent and sovereign Communist state despite growing Russian disapproval.

President Nicolae Ceausescu, the state and party leader, once again propounded his doctrine that membership in the Soviet-led Communist alliance does not preclude a member state from formulating its own policies at home and abroad.

His unyielding statement is a challenge to Soviet authorities on the most basic of issues—defence, foreign policy, ideology and economic co-operation.

Nearly 2,000 delegates attended the opening of the Romanian 10th party congress to hear a five-hour statement by Ceausescu restating in clear terms his intention to pursue an open-door policy toward Communist and non-Communist countries alike.

Apparently the strong-willed leader no longer fears the fate which overtook Czechoslovakia last summer—although he has charted a course certain to bring him into continuing friction with the Kremlin.

The Soviet delegate, Konstantin Katushev, warned the Romanians that the visit of President Nixon to Bucharest was construed in Moscow as an attempt to drive wedges between Communist states.

Katushev, without mentioning names, reminded the Romanians that wedge-driving tactics by "perfidious bridge builders" could also lead to counter-revolutionary plots. He obviously had Czechoslovakia in mind. Economic penetration by the West, Katushev warned, also could have dire consequences.

'OLD COMMIE TACTICS'

Signs—and Candidates—Hacked Down

Election signs are being hacked down in Saanich and the Islands riding while Social Credit and New Democratic Party candidates verbally hatchet each other.

Socred candidate John Tisdalle said today axe-wielding sign smashers are trying to stamp out freedom of speech.

★ ★ ★

He was angered by the destruction of several of his signs on Pender and Galiano Islands and throughout Central Saanich.

"They're using the old Commie tactics," said Tisdalle.

He said the same tactics had been used by youths carrying NDP signs in Vancouver in a confrontation Friday with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"It's a planned crusade by some idiots against freedom of speech."

Tisdalle said as he left Galiano Island Tuesday he saw his signs slashed to pieces "as if someone was trying to wreak vengeance on the free enterprise system."

NDP candidate Don Johannessen, replying to Tisdalle's charges, said the Socred was "running real scared."

★ ★ ★

"We've had signs destroyed and stolen," he said.

"But I've told everyone working on my campaign — under no conditions do you touch the signs of any other political candidates."

Johannessen said he believed the sign smashers were probably adherents of none of the political parties.

"Tisdalle has no campaign issues so he's using name-calling.

"This shows his complete disregard for the working man," said Johannessen. "He's endangering the lives of workmen."

The Liberals have not found themselves involved in the sign warfare but then they only have about a dozen election signs up.

★ ★ ★

"We're just getting our campaign rolling," said Paddy Palmer, campaign manager for Louis Lindholm.

"We'll be doing a little of everything during this campaign, except knocking down other candidates' signs."

GIANT SEWER PIPES make great echo chambers and private forts, but the pipe will be buried soon as work starts on a $200,000 sewer line being installed by Saanich and the province. The line will run from the Tillicum area to service a vocational school and Glendale Hospital, both under construction in the Wilkinson Road Jail area. Eventually the line will serve as a main trunk to service the whole, unsewered area around the jail. (Bill Halkett photo.)

NDP and Grits Out Swinging, But Bennett?

The Liberals and New Democrats are moving their heavy artillery into Greater Victoria but the Social Credit big gun remains silent here thus far.

Premier Bennett traditionally saves Victoria for the latter part of his election campaigns, but the five local Socred candidates don't know if he'll be coming here this year or not.

No plans have been made for the traditional Victoria rally for the five area candidates.

Reginald Pring, campaign manager for Victoria cabinet ministers W. N. Chant and Waldo Skillings, said Tuesday he has heard nothing about a rally.

"I know Mr. Bennett likes a rally in Victoria," he said. "But I haven't heard of one being planned for this year."

NDP leader Tom Berger and Liberal leader Pat McGeer are making a determined effort to woo voters here where four of the five MLAs in the last legislature were Socreds.

Berger wound up his second visit to the area Tuesday.

McGeer arrives Monday and a Liberal corn roast is planned for Tuesday at Elk Lake for area supporters.

McGeer then goes up island to campaign and tentatevely will spend another day later in the week campaigning in this area.

Prominent NDP MLA in the last legislature, Dave Barrett arrives Friday to campaign with Saanich and the Islands candidate Don Johannesson.

Douglas to Aid Campaign

Johanessen will enlist the aid of national NDP leader T. C. Douglas Saturday on Salt Spring Island.

Sunday all local NDP candidates will appear with Douglas at a picnic at the Sea Bluff farm of Jeff Mitchell in Metchosin.

The appearance of the big names is only a small part of the local campaign however.

Householders will be deluged with literature and canvassers. Candidates will drink a lot of coffee as the campaign enters its last two weeks today.

Victoria NDP candidates Peter Bunn and Phil Fawcett have abandoned the coffee-party technique in favor of door-to-door canvassing in Victoria riding.

"Everybody's tried coffee but it's canvassing that wins elections," said Bunn.

Librals Mel Couvelier and Ian Stewart believe the coffee parties are an important forum for candidates.

"There are 41,000 people in this riding and it's just impossible to shake that many hands," explained campaign manager David Wilson.

Cabinet ministers Chant and Skillings will hold a party for their workers tonight at Socred headquarters.

They, along with NDP and Liberal candidates attended a noon all-candidates meeting today at the Student's Union Building, University of Victoria.

Two all-candidates meetings are scheduled for Victoria riding Aug. 20.

In the afternoon the Silver Threads are sponsoring a meeting at the Centennial Square building and at 8:30 p.m. the Jaycees will present the candidates at Central Junior High School.

In Cowichan-Malahat the Liberals have finally entered the race with the nomination Tuesday of James Bigsby, 26, a Victorian and personal assistant to McGeer.

Nomination Deadline Passed

Nominations for candidates running in the Aug. 27 provincial election closed at 1 p.m. today.

Returning officers for southern Vancouver Island ridings were at municipal halls in Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, Duncan and the Victoria Court House to officially announce the close of nominations and announce candidates names.

●

By noon, candidates were:

Victoria — W. N. Chant (SC); Waldo Skillings (SC); Peter Bunn (NDP); Phil Fawcett (NDP); Ian Stewart (L); Mel Couvelier (L); Bill Scott (Ind).

Saanich and the Island — John Tisdalle (SC); Don Johannessen (NDP); Louis Lindholm (L).

Gang of Six Juveniles Pursued In City-Wide Rash of Break-Ins

By HUMPHRY DAVY

More than 120 break-ins and thefts have been committed by juveniles in the Greater Victoria area since the summer holidays began.

Police youth squads believe the number of house-breaking offences committed by pre-teen-age groups to be the highest on record.

Every district in the Greater Victoria area is affected, but the greater number of offences are in Oak Bay where 50 break-ins took place in July alone.

The juveniles between 10 and 13 and operating in gangs or in pairs, broke into homes, and stole mostly cash, watches, jewellery and transistor radios.

In one home $250 in cash was stolen.

CHEQUES TAKEN

Family allowance cheques were also taken and in some cases actually cashed at banks.

Chief John Green of Oak Bay said break-ins committed by juveniles jumped from six in June to 50 in July.

"As far as I know there hasn't been a year like this," he said "Our officers have worked on cases around the clock."

He said the majority of house break-ins were committed by a group of six.

"The moved into every district," he said. Two went to the mainland and also committed numerous thefts in Vancouver, North Vancouver and Burnaby.

The chief made it clear that he did not think the number of delinquents is increasing.

"The offences have," he said, "but these have mainly been committed by a group of children who have problems — problems which we haven't yet been able to solve."

Saanich police reported 42 offences, many committed by the same group operating in Oak Bay.

Detective-Sergeant Robin Stewart said members of the youth squad have been under strain since the start of the summer holidays.

"From a taxpayer's point of view it has been a costly summer," he said. "Investigations are costly. It takes time to wind up these cases."

The city reported 30 breaking and entering incidents in July. There were also three thefts over $50.

DOORS UNLOCKED

Esquimalt police said they have had about 12 break-ins.

Police said in many cases the juveniles entered the homes while their owners were working in their back gardens. They left the front door unlocked.

But quite a number of homes were broken into when their owners were away, they said.

Chief Green said many homeowners never realized their homes had been broken into until the delinquents had been caught.

"They thought they had lost the money or mislaid it," he said.

He said the young offenders often did not know what to do with the loot and threw away such things as watches and jewelery.

He said the force spent considerable time tracing down the owners of stolen articles.

Police said parents could do much to stop juvenile thefts if they questioned their children on all new articles they might bring home.

"Front doors should also be locked," said one officer.

Ask the Times

Q. Who could I write for the rules and building restrictions for bathtubs in the annual Nanaimo to Vancouver bathtub race? What is the average cost of bathtub fully built without motor?

A. Write to Mrs. S. Koster, 375 Newcastle Ave., Nanaimo. The average cost of the bathtub without motor is $35 to $40.

Fire Bans Lifted And Eased

The ban on outside burning was lifted in Victoria this morning and partially relaxed in Saanich.

It now is possible to use incinerators at any time in the city but only between 8 a.m. and noon in Saanich.

Deputy fire chief Glen Robbins said Saanich is only partially lifting its ban because the municipality has vast areas of bush which the city doesn't have.

Permits for outside burning are needed during summer months.

Restrictions were imposed because of dry conditions, but this was followed by some rain Monday and Tuesday.

Victoria weathermen are predicting no more showers for a few days, and temperatures are expected to be slightly warmer.

Humidity, which was high Tuesday, is dropping today, but this should reduce the fire hazard, officials said.

Forecast high for today is 55, and for Thursday, 67.

To the Tune of Archaic Woodwinds Berger Calls Bennett All Huff

By SUSAN MAYSE

Hippies, leather-jacketed motorcyclists and University of Victoria students mingled with New Democratic Party campaigners to hear party leader Tom Berger in Centennial Square Tuesday night.

As the cast of The Merchant of Venice performed intricate medieval dances to the sound of archaic woodwinds on the other side of the fountain, a crowd of 150 gathered to hear Berger's short address.

Premier Bennett is waging a campaign of insults, not policies, he told them.

'NEGATIVE PROGRAM'

"It's very interesting the way the premier never talks about his campaign," he said.

"He's running a negative program — his campaign is just 'keep those guys (NDP) out so we can stay in' — he's always talking about the NDP instead.

"I've been all over the province, and everywhere people are asking questions about the issues," Berger said.

NO FAVORS

"Pollution, education, industrial development — they're as concerned as we are about fundamental things. No one's listening to idle chatter about socialism, except perhaps Mr. Chant and Waldo Skillings," he said.

British Columbia's major industries of tourism, fishing, farming and ranching are being crippled by pollution, he warned.

"This government has killed off thousands of jobs all over the province because it refuses to enforce the laws on pollution."

And NDP government in B.C. would have "no favors for friends, no favors for Commonwealth Trust, no favors for people who pollute our water sources," he told the crowd.

Berger urged NDP supporters to publicize the party. "Make sure you tell your friends and neighbors about our program — don't let Bennett tell them — he's an unreliable source," he said.

"I think you can sense a mood of change in the people of this province. People are looking for a new leader, a new direction.

"We're the party that can provide it."

Two men, dressed in buckskins and high boots, bearded and earringed, approached the party leader for his opinion on gun legislation, and compulsory motorcycle helmets.

"I would hate to see indiscriminate use of guns as in the United States — I think it's the mark of a sick society," Berger responded. "I'm all in favor of legislation preventing people from having guns."

However, motorcycle enthusiasts Daniel O'Brien, 28, and Laird Haggart, 22, said they weren't satisfied with the NDP leader's response to their questions.

"He didn't answer my questions at all," said O'Brien, a past student leader at Uvic.

Esquimalt Buildup Indicated Again

A senior Canadian armed forces officer today strengthened indications that Greater Victoria bases will not suffer by defence department cutbacks.

In fact, Col. Robert S. Turnbull, the Pacific maritime command's chief of staff for logistics, said he felt that possible shutdown of bases in other parts of Canada could result in the reinforcing of army and navy bases in Esquimalt.

Assistant deputy minister of national defence Tom Morry told the National Defence Employees' Association convention at Halifax Tuesday that he estimated 3,000 defence employees may be laid off in the department's consolidation program.

Turnbull feels there will be no layoffs here.

"As far as I am aware there is no suggestion of any phasing out here." With the work that HMC Dockyard has, including the major conversions of HMCS Gatineau and HMCS Rainbow, "it seems to me that we stand to benefit from the base consolidation program."

★ ★ ★

He confirmed that possible closure of bases in Alberta could result in the expansion of Esquimalt army and navy bases.

"There is a big study going on at the present time and the minister (Defence Minister Leo Cadieux) said recently that an announcement would be made at the end of August.

"To date there has been no departmental announcement but we are expecting one any day."

Turnbull said that a program of consolidation had been carried out by the Canadian Armed Forces Base, Esquimalt.

"The consolidation we have done has involved the reshuffling of bodies but no phasing out.

"As you know the dockyard and the base now both come under one identity. The aim is for greater efficiency."

Gatineau Arrives Thursday

The destroyer-escort HMCS Gatineau will arrive in Esquimalt Thursday at 2:30 p.m.

Commanded by Cmdr. W. A. Hughes, she will undergo a major conversion at HMC Dockyard and is one of four Restigouche class ships due for modernization.

On Thursday, the Gatineau will have completed a course which saw her leave Halifax earlier this year, steaming through the Panama Canal en route to Victoria.

The $3.3 million conversion will take 15 months.

Arthur Mayse . . .

NON-FISHERMEN MAY scoff at the phenomenon of the lucky outfit, but I've met few properly salted salmon chasers who haven't encountered it. Like extra-sensory perception, the fortune that favors one assemblage of trolling tackle has never been adequately explained.

Possibly faith or the lack of it has a bearing on the matter, and by that theory I choose to abide.

My wife owns just such a rod. I made it for her in the pre-fiberglass era from a length of Calcutta cane, at an outlay that left change from a five dollar bill.

★

It has become thoroughly disreputable. Its ferrule jams, its cork-strip butt wrapping is chipped, and it gives off a protesting creak when under strain.

I would gladly trade a fine, store-new replacement for it, and throw in my pet reel as a goodwill gesture.

No dice. Owners of lucky outfits aren't open to offers. Neither would I be if that rod were mine.

★

It went north with us last weekend to the top of the Gulf, and a fishing prospect that was not of the best.

There were tyee in the famed Tyee Pool off Campbell River mouth where the great spawners linger before their death-journey upstream.

Enough lesser chinooks had been caught to keep hope alive. But coho were scarce, even though a run was reported to have put in down near Nanaimo, and another over in the Sechelt area. Perhaps the fishing would pick up in September, our host suggested with professional optimism.

Another resort owner—his cottages and trailer camp well-filled, but most of his outboard boats idle—was more forthright.

"They tell me it's the worst coho season in 50 years," he said. "It has me worried."

However, it's the line in the water that stands the chance. Late that afternoon, we shoved off from Campbell River with good friends who had trailered a 23-footer up from California. They were also wondering what had happened to the coho.

★

The previous day, they'd run out to Mittlenatch Island on the strength of a report that its tricky surrounding waters had yielded some good catches. They caught no coho, but took a bouncing when a breeze from the mainland clashed with the tide-rip, and were glad, this next time out, to give the inshore reaches a try.

With a rod out on either side and a deeper rig fishing the slot between, we eased south through prime salmon water. Inland, the summit of Mt. Albert Edward showed plain in a widening belt of clear sky.

★

It was a calm, mild evening, fish or no fish, and I suppose we were ungrateful to feel that a burst of harsh chatter from one of those silent reels was needed to complete it.

The tide was running briskly, and slow though our passage was, the rod-tips nodded out too fast a beat for my liking.

Win's especially. I told her so.

The words were no sooner spoken than her lucky outfit issued a contradiction. It bent, it creaked, and the reel secured to its handle with a pair of hose clamps made fisherman's music.

This was no coho, but we were not of a mind to turn up our noses at a plump jackspring. The dwarf chinook did look a mite lonely in the fish-box, but it was the only salmon to come our way, and with tartare sauce to set it off, it would make a toothsome meal.

★

Even Win's lucky outfit failed to stir a fin next day. Still, September may be better, and if it isn't, we can always remember the 18-pound coho that put the creak in a rod which really should be retired.

Not that it will be. While it remains functional, its owner will cherish it.

And, it goes without saying, keep right on outscoring me!

YOU CAN HELP OUR WHEAT FARMERS!

You'll save when you serve more foods made with wheat!

Help our Wheat Farmers

Enjoy more products made with wheat!

Aid in any emergency must be swift and sure to be effective. As you know, our wheat farmers face a critical situation. Countries normally importing our wheat to supplement their crops now have surpluses of their own. Because a crisis in our wheat economy is of national concern, we have taken swift action to render what aid we can. Our trucks are rushing to our stores loaded with wheat products. We have the right prices to swiftly move these products off our shelves to make room for more. Won't you help? Take advantage of these low prices to serve the large variety of wheat products to your family often. You'll be serving good eating, good nutrition at savings.
